Snap Shots Of The

HUMAN SIDE OF LIFE

By FRANCES GILBERT FRAZIER

The good old dictionary defines "Emotion" as follows: "mental agitation; excited feeling; passion." We human beings have so many strings attached to our emotions that, at times, we feel as though we were one of those animated wooden monkeys that run up and down a stick as our fingers dictate.

Many a friendly argument has arisen as to whether the person, with his emotion wrapped up in a wet towel of suppression gets half the joy out of life as the guy whose emotions swirl him into a giddy excitement half the time the other half he spends his moments wiping the mud out of his eyes as he drags torpidly along the paths of depression.

Well, what we really started out to write about was the emotional thrill we all get out of a copy of the home paper. A recent visitor to Mounta brought us back a copy of our favorite afternoon paper, and we dove right in and read our way out page by page.

Familiar locations brought back a nostalgic urge to again tread the old paths and renew friendships that have been allowed to sort of back-slide due to long absence. Advertisements of shops long associated with delightful dealings, names of streets that brought back memories of many happy hours spent in their vicinity; meetings of certain clubs with which the family had such close assimilation.

All of these items meant so much to one who will never really get the love of their home out of their system despite the fact that the home of their adoption has become equally dear to them.

Reading along in the society column, we are suddenly brought to the realization that time does not stand still for a minute. A very close and devoted friend is attending the marriage of her granddaughter (whoops, my dear... guess that dates a fella!) And then the newly arrived list bears the parental names of youngsters we loved as youngsters themselves. Tenopus fugits... and how!

Loving baseball as we do, we gleefully find our home team leading the league by a comfortable margin and again we drift back into the past when we regularly attended the fascinating contests and lustily entered into the barrage of boos that were hurled at the umpire when his decisions went against the grain.

Oh those were the days! And so are these. New friends that have become steadfast and dependable old friends. New surroundings that have encompassed the past and put it where it can be reached only by search and request. New emotions, new thoughts, all blend into a present so acceptable that we would exchange it only for a future equally promising.

But we still get a whole of a kick out of the home paper!

Early June outlook points to the largest grain crop in the history of the world.

Mrs. Stentz Is Awarded Diploma From W.C.T.C.

Mrs. Haseltine Swift Stentz was among those recently receiving diplomas from Western Carolina Teachers College. Mrs. Stentz completed her work, having majored in education in mid-winter, but was not awarded her diploma until the regular graduation was held at the close of the college term.

Mrs. Stentz, a graduate of Montreat College, took special work at Western Carolina Teachers College required for teaching. Immediately after completing her work she was elected to teach in the Haywood county schools, and has been filling a vacancy since then. She has been elected to teach during the 1946-47 school term, but her assignment has not been announced as yet.

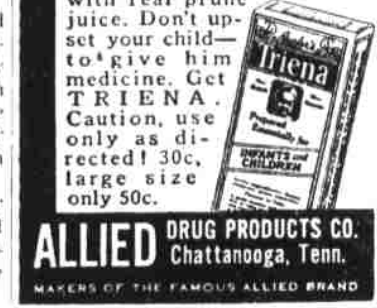

Fresh fish prices generally are in a slump on the Carolina seaboard, according to Extension Service reports.

SLUGGISH?

Your child is suffering when he's irritable. Watch for a coated tongue — often the sign a laxative is needed.

Try Triena FOR CHILDREN

Faulty elimination often makes children sluggish and restless. Your child can get relief with Triena—the famous laxative made with senna. And children like to take Triena, because it's flavored with real prune juice. Don't upset your child—give him medicine. Get TRIENA. Caution: use only as directed! 30c, large size only 50c.
