Baptists Arrange For Special Meet To Consider The Reynolds Offer

WINSTON-SALEM The general board of the Baptist State convention voted unanimously to call a special session of the Reynolds foundation to Wake Forest College.

Although no definite time was set for calling the special session prior to the annual convention scheduled for November at Asheville, the resolution adopted by the board stated that it should be held at some central point as soon as practicable.

The president, recording secretary and general secretary of the convention are authorized to set the date. In the place of the convention and notify the churches to select and send messengers.

Although no time was set in the resolution, the last week in July or the first week in September were freely mentioned by board members as logical times for the special session.

This is the first time such a session of the convention has been called. It was decided to break this precedent in order that a final decision may be made on the offer of the Reynolds foundation to make a $10,500,000 endowment available to Wake Forest College if it is moved to Winston-Salem.

The main purpose for which today's board meeting was called was to get the board's approval of incurrence of a debt by the convention sufficient to build a 140 room addition to the North Carolina Baptist hospital. This was handled briefly by referring it to the board for later decision.

J. Roy Clifford of Lexington, named as head of the convention's main committee to investigate and make recommendations to the board in the matter, said his committee was not prepared to bring its final report. He said the committee from the general board, working with the hospital committee, would continue to study and give publicity to the urgent needs of the institution for more space and include a final report in the general board's report to the state convention at its next meeting.

Clifford said the consensus of people he had talked with was against incurring the debt to the convention although they admitted need for additional beds to increase the ministry of the hospital and afford more facilities to medical students.

Other business included the report of the committee appointed to study needs of churches in college communities where aid is being given which was made by S. L. Morgan, Jr. recommendation that a committee be appointed to map out a program of town and country work and suggest a person for the position, election of Rev. J. C. Camp as secretary of Evangelism at a salary of $4,200 annually plus allowance for a home, acceptance of the resignation of Mrs. Roger Marshall as manager of the Baptist Book Store and appointments of Harry Y. Gamble of Statesville and George Beavers of Apex to fill unexpired terms on the board.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Van Gieson have arrived from their winter home in Orlando, and have joined the latter's son, and daughter in law Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kinsey at their home on the Pigeon Road.
