"Most Disabled" Veteran Looks Forward To Future

Max Robinson
Of Hazelwood
Recalls Normandy
Battle Of 1944

Two years ago the blue skies over Normandy looked down upon a life and death struggle between the defending forces that held a continent in bondage and the olive drab of Allied liberating armies. Of the many bullets that were shot, some went for short distances, others went further. One reached, eventually, to Hazelwood.

Max Robinson was machine-gun section leader, a staff sergeant with the 119th Inf. Regt. of the Old Hickory division. His Company D had landed at Omaha beach on June 13 and helped hold the tiny foothold taken in the invasion. By July an attack started on the key town that was a wedge in the American position. St. Lo. Co. D was in the push, and on July 13 suffered casualties, among them Sgt. Robinson.

He was hit in the spine with a rifle bullet. He didn't get to St. Lo, but was given an emergency trip to the rear by the Army medics. He arrived in New York on a transport plane Aug. 20 and was sent to a service hospital at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. The bullet had left him paralyzed from the waist down.

S/Sgt. Robinson was discharged coming back to the lower part of his body and he is able to move around with crutches for a few minutes at a time.

John Williams of the Veterans Administration, whose work has put him in contact with disabled veterans in the area from Asheville to Murphy, states that "as far as

Family of Col. Jackson To Join Him in Paris

Lt. Col. Winfred Jackson, formerly with the Farm Security Administration here is now with the Military Government in Paris. He will be joined in the near future by Mrs. Jackson and their daughter, Miss Jackson, a senior cadet nurse who plans to complete her training in an American hospital in Paris, and Bill Jackson, the son will enter high school in Paris. Col. Jackson has been stationed in the European theater for the past 18 months.

I know, Max is the most seriously injured veteran in the western part of the state.

A heavy set young man with considerable strength still in his body, Max is friendly and completely at ease with callers. He misses going to ball games and working, but knows that that will come when his body recovers more.

Before entering the Army in September 1940 he worked at the Unagusta Furniture company, so knows a trade that he intends to follow when in a position to do so. Max plans to open a woodworking shop and make novelty items at a shed behind his home.

He has most of what he needs except a few hand tools. "What I need most," he remarked, slapping his legs, "is for the pain to stop." There were times when it was very bad, but he said, it could have been worse. He is very glad to be alive, and looks to the future with no dismay.

mother, Mrs. Bell Robinson, in Hazelwood. For months he was unable to move, but feeling has been Oct. 27, 1944 and shortly afterwards returned home to his wife, and

Curbed Motorists
English law in 1895 was a little hard on horseless carriages, in that it required that any carriage not drawn by horses be preceded by a man carrying a red flag, with the further restriction that it could not travel faster than two miles an hour.
