HISTORIC CARRIER BURNS AFTER ATOM BLAST

HOURS AFTER THE A-BOMB was dropped by the crew of "Dave's Dream" on a fleet of target ships, the light carrier U.S.S. Independence is shown burning in Bikini Lagoon. Famed in the recent war as the Mighty "I," the fast task force carrier was the first reported in flames after the explosion. The photo was taken from the deck of salvage ship U.S.S. Reclaimer, Joint Army-Navy Task Force photo via Navy Radio. (International) is the placing of submerged submarines in the target fleet, and it will be interesting to note the effect of the bomb force upon the steel hulls of these vessels beneath the water

Naval scientists predict that force of the underwater blast will create waves of sufficient height, possibly 10 or more feet which will sweep over low-lying Bikini island, al though this was also forecast in the first blast and did not materialize.

Meantime, endless arguments proceed as to the degree of damage to the ships, the location of the bomb burst, whether the drop from the plane was a "near miss," probable loss of life had the ships been manned with full complement, and comparative efficiency of this first Bikini bomb as compared to the bombs at Almogordo, Hiroshima and Nagasaki,

Precision Bombing.

When it is considered that this bomb was dropped from a height of something like six miles and hit within a 1,000-yard circle, this reporter would consider that pretty good precision bombing.

Adm. T. A. Solberg of the bureau of ships, however, declared that insofar as he could judge, every ship damaged by the bomb, with the exception of the Independence, could be put into fighting shape within
