

Radar Taught At Army's Big Training Unit

Average Radar Course Lasts About Six Months; Men May Enroll

It was announced recently by Sergeant Francis M. Barry, commander of the recruiting station in Lenoir, that the principles of radar maintenance and repair equipment, are taught at the Army's huge radar school located at Fort Monmouth, New Jersey. All men who enroll in this school must have extensive knowledge of operation, repair and maintenance of radio sets. In the Army this knowledge can be obtained by attending the Signal Corps Radio school.

The average radar course lasts about six months and makes use of the self-progress method of instruction. This method enables a man to progress as rapidly as he can absorb the material.

The course is divided into three parts, or phases. First, the familiarization phase in which the student becomes familiar with the outside appearance, operation, simple adjustments and routine preventive maintenance procedures. In the second phase, the student learns the complete step by step analysis pertaining to the working of each component part of the set. Every student performs all the adjustments and tuning procedures. This phase is followed by a thorough session in troubleshooting. Upon completion of each phase the student is given a practical written examination.

The Army considers radar and its school so vital to our national defense that every type of equipment is available for instructional purposes. The same policy holds true for instructions. These in-

Methodists To Hold Special Workers Meet

A meeting of the pastors and workers among the children of the Methodist churches will be held at the First Methodist church in Waynesville on Monday afternoon, Sept. 9th at 2:30 p. m.

Mrs. Emma Jane Kramer, of the general board of the Methodist church and Mrs. C. W. Kent, both out-lying church workers, will take part in the program.

Newsers, kindergarten, primary and junior workers and parents of these age groups are asked to attend the meeting and hear these outstanding leaders give a lesson in how to run the Bible.

For the many young men now studying in the regular army, the Signal Corps radar school offers opportunities that cannot be equaled in the civilian world. After training in the school, the successful graduate is very well equipped for a good position, either in the Army or civilian life. It is not at all unusual for a man to quickly attain the grade of master sergeant after completing the radar school course.

In the years to come radar will be used in almost every phase of military, industrial and commercial life. Air fields will use it to keep track of planes and to provide bearings for blind landings. Ships will use it to prevent accidents with other ships, lockers, or nets. A device has been developed for use on railway locomotives. It is tied into the throttle automatically so that as the return signal grows stronger it continuously closes the throttle and eventually sets the brakes, preventing collisions with other trains.

The Signal Corps is only one of the many branches of service now open for enlistments. For information concerning this, or other branches of service, contact the nearest army post or recruiting station.

The recruiting station in Lenoir is located in the post office building and in Morganton it is located in the Court building, South Sterling street.

Traffic At Lake Heavy All Season

Traffic at Lake Junaluska this season included cars from 43 states and 1 foreign country, according to Dr. Frank S. Love, superintendent of the Assembly.

"There is every reason to believe that we had visitors from every state, since many did not come in their cars," Dr. Love explained, in commenting on the successful season which has just closed.

It was estimated that 10,000 people visited on the Assembly grounds during the season. More than 7,500 bought tickets for a stay of several days to weeks, while many others attended concerts and special programs given at the auditorium.

work out the will of God in Christian international relations. We need to reaffirm our faith that the way to overcome evil is with good. We need to keep in mind that international relations from the standpoint of the church are influenced by our domestic relations. The things we do in America touch the entire world."

Carl Carpenter, who holds two Legion of Merit awards, declared that war is not a curse but an effect brought about by greed, racial discrimination and hatreds, called Christian forces to task for neglect of Christian training of American youth and for failing to sound a positive note that might have prevented the last war. He said that one of the greatest crimes of the age was to thrust American youth into a war with death before they had learned what it is to live.

"If we had made our Christianity real with the soldiers and they had walked as Christians over the world, there would have been no World War," he declared. "It is essential to make Christian teaching real and active in the everyday world."

"The picture of a peaceful world rests on us in America. But how can we make a Christian world until we develop Christian conduct at home. If we make our Christianity real at home we can make it real anywhere. The greatest influence for good and for Christ is that exerted by a plain ordinary American soldier who walks as a Christian among his enemies."

"I claim this war came because the church failed to speak the mind of God. Here in America where we have religious freedom and freedom to interpret the Christian message, our religion has failed in the quality of religious training of its youth who went to war. The only solution for the future peace of the world is to take the message of Christ seriously in America."

ing of wild turkey will be allowed this season has been increased to 15 from the original list of five set up by the Board of Conservation and Development at its July meeting.

The 10 additional counties are Chatham, Durham, Granville, Hoke, Lee, Montgomery, Moore, Orange, Person, and Richmond. The bag limit in these counties will be one per day and one per season.

In opening the five original counties - Bertie, Halifax, Martin, Northampton and Washington - the board left to the Division of Game and Inland Fisheries the decision as to an open season in any other areas.

The turkey season will be uniform in the 15 counties - November 23 through January 31.

EXTRACTS READY . . . A booklet containing extracts from North Carolina game and inland fisheries laws has been prepared and printed by the Division and 150,000 copies are being distributed. Copies may be obtained from fish and game protectors, or direct from the Division of Game and Inland Fisheries, Education Building, Raleigh.

Sections included in the extract cover license provisions and fees, important provisions of the laws, seasons, bag and creel limits and federal regulations in migratory wildfowl.

The extracts this year are being distributed earlier than usual, and more copies than in the past have been made available, in view of the expected record sale of licenses.

and Young knocked him home, but Green River led off the ninth with Clyde Peck's double, and he tied the works up on brother Bill's sacrifice. But Ervin Shook had out a newly had hand when Hazelwood took their last stand, not to third on a sacrifice and wild pitch, and Elmer Dudley ended the game with a safe drive to left field.

Although play in the outfield was handicapped by sun-in-the-eye, both fields exhibited talent to dispatch the crowd. Clyde Peck at second base pulled in the hottest rally of the game and started one of the three double plays pulled by the visitors. Shortstop Link Drake was another handy man who handled a lot of traffic, getting assists on seven put-outs.
