

12 Top Nazis To Hang, Seven Face Imprisonment, Three Are Acquitted

Sentence was passed Monday on 22 top Nazis at the War Criminals Trials in Nuernberg, Germany, condemning Hermann Goering, Joachim Von Ribbentrop and 10 others to death. Seven were given prison sentences of from 10 years to life, and three were acquitted.

Execution is to be carried out within 15 days to the announcement—by October 16. Tomorrow is the last day during which appeals for clemency may be filed with the secretariat of the military tribunal. It is expected that all appeals will be rejected.

These were the men who ruled with Hitler, his foreign ministers, police chiefs, military planners, Jew batters and terrorists. Some protested that the crimes for which they were charged was ordered by those higher in power, but these War Trials set a precedent in making national aggression a crime and those who violate the principles of accepted rules of warfare individual criminals. The final score:

Hermann Goering, Number 2 Nazi and air marshal—death.

Joachim von Ribbentrop, foreign minister and planner of international aggression—death.

Wilhelm von Keitel, chief of the Nazi High Command—death.

Ernest Kaltenbrunner, chief of

LOUISA'S LETTER

Dear Louisa:

I am twenty years old. Three years ago I met a soldier and we both fell in love at first sight. We went together steady for a year and a half and the rest of the time he spent overseas. During that time I received over two hundred letters saying he would be happy when he could get home and marry me.

On his return home I received a telegram saying he would see me soon but he didn't come to my home until three months after. He stayed four days then went back to camp.

I received two letters after that and then no more. That has been eight months ago.

Should I take it for granted that we are through or should I have hopes. MOLLY—Montreal, Canada

Answer:

Something must have happened just after your friend reached his own country to cause him to act as he has. He either met some other girl who attracted him or got into some trouble, I should think.

If he had come directly to you and then gone away for a long while, it would seem that he had been disappointed with you and wanted to call the whole thing off. But to telegraph you and then not appear seems peculiar.

I think you will have to judge by how he acted when he was with you. Did he still seem in love with you or had he changed? Did he seem worried or upset?

Why don't you write to him and ask him to let you know exactly how he feels because it will be much better to know the truth, no matter what it is, than to be uncertain. My guess is that he is probably married although he may be in some other trouble. GOOD LUCK. LOUISA.

Dear Louisa:

I'm a girl of sixteen and my mother objects to my having dates while I don't think there is any harm in it.

I've never really had a date with a boy although I am a junior in high school.

I have been with a crowd and that seems to be all right with my mother. My father doesn't say too much but I know if I ever had a date he wouldn't like it.

I have a sister who is eighteen and she has never cared about the boys so I think that is probably the reason my folks think I shouldn't.

I don't know what to do and when a fellow asks me to go out I feel very embarrassed by having to say my mother doesn't allow me to go out with boys.

What should I do? "DATELESS"—VT.

Answer:

I think you are old enough to have dates with boys provided they are nice boys and not too much older than you. I also think your mother should know where you are going and that you will be home at a reasonable hour. If you are going to the movies, a party or supper right in town it is proper for you to go with just your date but if you expect to do any riding through the country to another town it will be better to go with another couple.

If your mother has taught you right from wrong and if she knows the boys you date, I think she should let you have a certain amount of freedom. LOUISA.

'Ike' Warns Against Another War Defines United States Democracy

BERLIN — Gen. Dwight Eisenhower was quoted in a Washington dispatch to Stars and Stripes recently as saying he was "convinced that the world cannot stand another global war and, as I see it, the thing to prevent such a tragedy happening is education."

The interview was given before the United States Chief of Staff, the wartime Supreme Commander of Allied Expeditionary Forces, departed for Europe to make a general inspection of American occupation forces. He left Halifax by ship today for Berlin.

General Eisenhower spoke fervently of his "foremost belief—my belief in democracy." The Army newspaper said his words were intended as a special message to American soldiers.

"No one wants war," Stars and Stripes quoted General Eisenhower. "The common man everywhere hates war. We must enlist that hatred of war to prevent it happening again."

"The peoples of the world must be made to realize how much the very thinking of war costs us all—how much of the revenue of our countries is being diverted to the purpose of war in these non-productive expenditures."

The General gave this definition of the basis of American democracy:

"The faith of all our people in our way of living, the equality of all men before the law, the understanding that man is not just a superior animal, but a thinking individual and the man-in-the-street's dislike for any form of authoritarianism."

He said it was the job of every man in the European occupation forces to "show, by example, that our way of life is best."

On American development of military weapons, General Eisenhower said he believed present-day rocket bombs and other guided missiles were comparable to the status of aviation in 1912, and that, when they were developed, they would make many World War II batteries as obsolete as the battering ram.

Reminded that before D-Day he had said he "loathed the Germans," General Eisenhower gave as his revised opinion: "Well, I think that it is probably illogical to hate a whole people, but I still have an intense hate for those people who made the German people think the way they did and drove them into that terrible war."

The hot-weather fanatics are beginning to suspect that there will be another Winter.
