Worthy Objectives for Life

"I said in mine heart, Go to now, I will prove thee with mirth, therefore enjoy pleasure: and behold, this also is vanity. I said of laughter, It is mad; and of mirth, What doeth it?"

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

"I sought in mine heart to give myself unto wine, yet acquainting mine heart with wisdom, and to lay hold on folly, till I might see what was that good for the sons of men."

Worthy Objectives for Life

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL (The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Sept. 28 is Ecclesiastes, the Memory Verse being Ecclesiastes 12:13, "Fear God, and keep His commandments.")

He gathered silver and gold, hired singers, both men and women. In other words, he became exceedingly wealthy and lived luxuriously, but found no happiness.

"Then I looked on all the works that my hands had wrought, and on the labor that I had labored to do: and, behold, all was vanity and vexation of spirit, and there was no profit under the sun."

He did see, however, that "wisdom excelleth folly, as far as light excelleth darkness."

With the writer of Ecclesiastes we believe "that there is nothing better for a man than that he should eat and drink, and that he should make his soul enjoy good in his labor. This also I saw, that it was from the hand of God."

There are many pleasures in life—eating and drinking, work well and faithfully done; the pursuit of wisdom, music, good company, travel, reading and sports. These in themselves will not bring permanent happiness, but if we believe in the goodness of God, live modestly no matter what our position in life may be; if we are kind and love one another as Jesus tells us to, not seeking the satisfactions of the soul in mere pleasure, we need not feel that "all is vanity," but be thankful for all our mercies and gain joy and contentment in life.

"For everything there is a season, and a time for every purpose under heaven: A time to be born, and a time to die; a time to plant, and a time to pick up that which is planted; He hath made everything beautiful in its time: also He hath set eternity in their hearts, yet so that man cannot find out the work that God hath done from the beginning even to the end." These verses take one back to the beginning of the Bible, when God saw what He had created and found it good.

"Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter," Ecclesiastes ends: "Fear God, and keep His commandments: for this is the whole duty of man."

"For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil."

Thus ends this most interesting book in the Bible, and the teacher has infinite possibilities in teaching this lesson. Some of the most beautiful passages should be read aloud, and discussions with and questions to the children as to what brings them as individuals the deepest satisfactions and happiness, emphasizing right attitudes always, should make a lively and valuable half hour's talk.

The Everyday Counselor

REV. HERBERT SPAUGH, D. D.

Here's another good book for newlyweds—"This Love of Ours" by Leslie R. Smith (Abingdon-Cokesbury $1). While written primarily for those about to be married and newlyweds, it could profitably be read by every married couple. It takes its place with the growing literature of small, compact readable and understandable handbooks on marriage.

Such books are appearing none too soon, as the American home is facing the greatest test of its existence. With one marriage in every three now ending in the divorce court, it is evident that there is something seriously wrong with our understanding of marriage.

Much of this domestic unrest comes from sheer ignorance of the meaning of marriage. A young man and a young woman after a more or less brief period of courtship, secure a license and are married. Very few of them receive any pre-marriage instruction. They expect two lives which have grown to maturity in entirely different surroundings to suddenly adjust themselves to one another so that they may "live happily ever after." They try to rear a home without any drawings and blueprints. No wonder so many of them are falling apart. We don't build houses that way.

"This Love of Ours" offers a readable and understandable blueprint of marriage. The 24 short chapters, each reinforced and colored with well-chosen poetry and quotations, offer helpful reading, factually presented with such good
