North Carolina is divided into two divisions, of which the western one embraces 49 counties, and 21 judicial districts.

Plains New Book Some 1,100 pages of trial briefs which he has assimilated as attorney and judge, containing legal definitions and precedents in a concise form, may form the basis for a third book.

His observations in 15 years' experience on the bench have been many. During World War II, he noted there was very little civil litigation.

Since the end of the war criminal dockets have increased greatly. . . but have not reached the peak which followed the first world war, he states.

Outstanding Cases The most outstanding civil case handled was one involving payment for the courthouse at High Point.

This arose out of the Guilford county commissioners indirectly authorizing an individual to borrow money and have the county's second courthouse constructed.

Later, when another group of commissioners were elected, they refused to honor the debt on the High Point building.

He has handled a large number of criminal cases, having pronounced the death penalty on 12 occasions. The most notable case was that of Payne and Turner, tried in Asheville for the slaying of a state highway patrolman.

Asked his opinion of capital punishment Judge Alley remarked that he at times has thought the death penalty too severe, "but I doubt if we are sufficiently civil-

Williams Named For Collegiate "Who's Who"

Larry L. Williams, senior law student at Wake Forest college, has been chosen for inclusion in the 1947-48 edition of "Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges."

Mr. Williams is president of the Wake Forest Student Bar Association, a member of Omicron Delta Kappa national honorary scholastic and leadership fraternity, a member of Phi Kappa Delta, national honorary speech fraternity, and a member of Phi Delta Phi, international legal fraternity.

Selection for "Who's Who" is based on outstanding effort and accomplishment in academic work, extra curricular activities, and in service to the school.

Mr. Williams will complete his law course in January of this year and will receive his degree at the May commencement. Before serving in the Army he received a B. S. degree from Wake Forest college. During his undergraduate career he was similarly outstanding, having served as president of the Southeastern Conference of International Relations Clubs, Speaker of the House of Representatives in the North Carolina Student Legislature, member of the varsity debate squad and Literary Society president.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Williams of Waynesville. He is elected clerk of court for his native county in 1898 and during his four year term studied law, passing the state bar examination in 1903. He was elected the Jackson county representative to the state legislature in 1905 and as solicitor for the 20th district in 1910, serving one term and declining to run again. He moved to Waynesville January 1, 1913 and practiced law privately until being appointed in 1933 as Superior Court judge.

On March 15 of this year he and Mrs. Alley, the former Elvira Hayes of a prominent Swain county family, will celebrate their 49th wedding anniversary. Active in political circles, he has been an ardent campaigner for the Democratic party.

Charles B. McCrary Leaves Throne Back From Farm Meet In Chicago

Charles B. McCrary, of Fines Creek, has returned from the American Farm Bureau's 29th annual meeting in Chicago where a resolution was passed calling for continuation of government price supports on farm commodities.

The resolution said the supports should be on a scale varying from 60 to 90 percent of parity, according to "the importance and peculiar condition of the commodity and its supply and price position."

McCrary was among 157 who made the trip to Chicago by a Southern Railway special train. During the four-day meeting, they took part in commodity conferences and discussions on various phases of agriculture, with emphasis on the farm program for the future.

Among the speakers at the Convention were Congressman Harold D. Cooley, Nashville, N. C., and J. B. Hutson, president of Tobacco Associates, Inc.

Cooley, pleading for retention of 80 percent of parity support, told some 5,000 delegates that "except for price support at 90 percent of parity, our own North Carolina farmers would be facing bankruptcy right now."

In an address on "Maintaining Agricultural Exports," Hutson said: "It appears that farm production can be, and probably should be, maintained during the years just ahead at fully one-fourth above the level of pre-war years."

"The people of the United States have never faced a more important decision," Hutson said, "than that confronting them in connection with the European Recovery Program."

on various committees for the state, and has represented North Carolina burley growers at Washington conferences. He was also representative of a farm group on beef cattle producers in Chicago back in 1934.

Mr. Noland is the first Haywood man to serve on the highway commission since the late Frank W. Miller.

Goode, Governor Cherry said, attempted to resign last summer, but agreed to stay on for several more months. The Asheville druggist gave as his reason for resigning the fact that he had been named a director for the Rexall drug chain.

This position, Goode said, would occupy so much of his time that he felt he would be unable to give proper attention to his duties as a highway commissioner. Goode has been absent at several recent meetings of the Highway Commission.

Since his appointment to the commission in January, 1945, by Governor Cherry, Goode frequently has been a storm center, oftentimes at odds with other members of the commission over highway contracts in his division.

Goode's first brush with his fellow commissioners occurred last year over contractual affairs between the commission and the Asheville Paving Company. This argument was carried on through several monthly sessions. More recently, Goode got into another disagreement with other commission members concerning the Asheville Contracting Company, which was barred by the commission from bidding on State road projects.

"HEMME"—Haywood county has gotten a lot of state highway money within the past few years and several important roads have been built since the war. Trouble is, they divert traffic away from rather than to or through Waynesville and Hazelwood. The Waynesville people point out that Haywood county is the only county in North Carolina bordering on another state which does not have direct outlet into the neighbor commonwealth. Although Haywood borders Tennessee for about 25 miles there is no way to get across the line except through another county."
