

Bridal Couple Is Feted At The Lodge

Miss Alice Weaver, of Sylva, was hostess of a dinner at The Lodge Monday evening honoring Miss Matilda Wilson, of Sylva, and Eugene LaVange, of Sevierville, Mass., whose wedding took place Wednesday in the Sylva Methodist Church.

Spring flowers were used in decoration and the long table, at which the guests were seated, was centered with a two-tiered wedding cake flanked with white candles.

The guest list included Miss Wilson and Mr. LaVange, Mrs. John Wilson, mother of the bride, Mrs. Grover Wilkes, Mrs. E. L. McKee, Miss Agnes Wilson, Miss Hicks Wilson, Hal Wilson, Frank Westcott and Howard Allison.

Mrs. Parkman Has Party For Daughter

Miss Elizabeth Ann Parkman celebrated her eighth birthday anniversary last Sunday afternoon with a party given by her mother, Mrs. Roy Parkman.

The guests were entertained during the afternoon at the Park theatre after which dinner was served at the Parkman residence on South Main Street.

A color scheme of pink and green was noted in the party appointments. The dining table was centered with a birthday cake flanked by pink candles and attractive favors marked each place.

Guests present were Misses Joan Prevost, Marty Watkins, Grey Watkins, Agnes Jane Roberson, Joan Weatherby, Susan Prevost, and Patience Ray.

New Fashions Make Him Reel

RIGGED OUT in tall topper and tails, a newsreel cameraman records New York Easter parade scenes in which furs and heavy overcoats were predominant. Although chill winds caused much feminine finery to be hidden behind wraps, one of the exceptions was Karen Lewis (left), stage beauty, shown wearing a suit of eggshell gabardine, with brown accessories. She admitted she was flirting with pneumonia.

MORE ABOUT Appropriation

the "contractual obligations" assumed by the federal government on taking over the park area that has led the state "to expect reasonable provisions for the Smokies Park, both as to administration, protection and maintenance on the one hand, and as to physical development on the other."

A two-state study drew the conclusion that the Smokies should get a total appropriation of $2,204,000, which is $840,809 larger than that recommended by the Budget Bureau.

This increase appears to be considerable, the brief continues, but the park is a big proposition—720 square miles of rugged mountain land. It includes the information that 40,000 more acres will be taken over by the Smokies from TVA on July 1.

Increased appropriation for the park personnel is urged as being most vital. The present staff is inadequate to care for the visitor load and supervise 440,000 acres, and with the headquarters on the area's northern edge in Tennessee "scarcely any personnel is available for supervising the North Carolina side of the park."

In this category, an increase of $41,701 is asked for additional personnel and $10,808 for added maintenance equipment.

Commenting on possible results of the request for a higher appropriation, Mr. Ray stated yesterday that this is difficult to forecast. Congressmen generally are more aware now of the park's right to development than ever before, but passage of the income tax reduction and Marshall Plan legislation will make more difficult the job of securing additional park funds.

Generally speaking, he added, whatever the sub-committee recommends on the appropriation will stand when it is brought to a vote.

Teaching a Tot to Face Pain

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

WHEN it is known that a child must face physical pain as in a dentist's chair, the doctor's office or a hospital, it is wise to let him know in a matter-of-fact way beforehand what to expect. To an article I wrote some months ago along this line I received the following from a mother:

"I have often wondered why more mothers don't realize that children who are told in a sensible way about illness or any ordeal to be faced, are easier to manage. We grow up as often fearful of the unexpected, but advance knowledge prepares us and seems to make whatever comes a little easier to bear. And so it is with children, who often have more courage than their elders.

Had Tonsils Out

"My own little girl, just six, had to have a tonsillectomy, which is considered a short and simple operation these days. I told her the doctor would go snip, snip and her bad tonsils would be gone; that her throat would be awfully sore for a few days, but that she was so big I knew she wouldn't cry, as that would make her worse. I also told her that they would put a funny little thing over her nose, not to be frightened but to take a deep breath and count two, another deep breath and count two, and so on to ten and then they would take it away.

"Before she came out from under the anesthetic her doctor came into her room. I asked him if she became frightened at the last moment or fought the ether. He looked rather puzzled and said, 'No, she was counting.' Afterwards she told me she only counted to six, and that she had funny smelling perfume. 'I was so glad I had prepared her when she was told she didn't cry, neither did she have the usual vomiting from too much ether, which so often happens if they fight it, and require more. The nurse complimented me on the behavior and cooperation of such a little girl. Of course, I was very pleased."

Phonics Coming Back

Over all America, phonics are coming back to the schoolroom. In some new school books are appearing exercises in phonetics, and a few of the children's magazines are presenting features of phonics in disguise—groups of pictured words which begin with the same sound, and rhyming pictured words. A teacher writes from Texas:

"Permit me to say how much your letter to me has meant concerning phonics. You probably do not remember, but you advised me to use a scrap book, with pictures of words beginning with letters of the alphabet.

"I wish that you might see my children's scrap books. They are full of pictures and letters and words, simply done but most effective. I am enclosing some samples. I am proud of them and the children and their parents will always cherish them. It seems to have made an indelible impression on them of the sounds of the individual letters, and I feel it will be invaluable to them in their school work now and later.

"We also made a poster of a number of words beginning with the same letter. For instance, I have one on my boys' room wall that has these pictures on it: ball, boy, bread, bat, bell, banana, boot, bus, bug, buggy. We have one for the letters A and C and so on down the alphabet. Each child can point to the picture and immediately associate the word beneath it with the sound of the initial letter."

Ex-King Michael Attends Church

GUARDED BY SECRET SERVICE men (foreground), ex-King Michael of Romania (hatless) leaves St. George's Romanian Orthodox Church in Detroit where he attended services. The deposed monarch still remains the nominal head of the national church. Later, at a news conference, Michael declared that the overwhelming Communist election victory in Romania was due to the fact that the elections were "packed".

Janet Deaver Is Married To Claud Frady

Miss Janet Elizabeth Deaver, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Deaver, of Canton, and Claude Frady, son of Mrs. Carrie Frady and the late Mr. Frady, were married in a double ring ceremony at the Mt. Zion Baptist church Easter Sunday with the Rev. Thomas E. Erwin, officiating.

The altar was banked with evergreens and gladioli interspersed with floor candelabra holding white candles.

A program of nuptial music was rendered by William Whitesides, Jr., and Miss Eula Bumgarner, cousins of the bride, and an appropriate poem was read by the Rev. Oder Burnette, accompanied by Mr. Whitesides.

The bride wore a blue suit with pink accessories and carried a white prayer book to which was attached a bouquet of pink roses with white satin streamers.

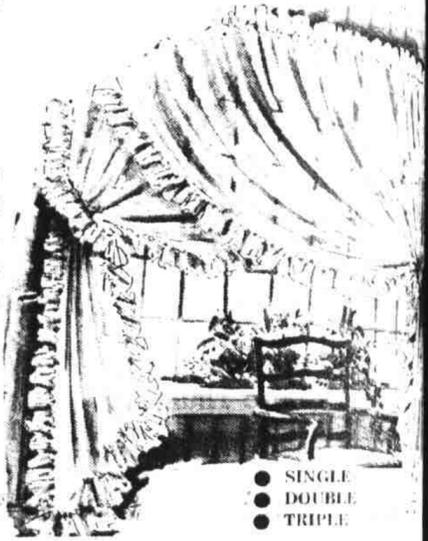

Miss Billie Bramlette was maid of honor. She wore a two-piece suit of light pink with black accessories, and carried a bouquet of
