

German War Brides Find Fast Pace In America

By RICHARD KASISCHKE AP Newswriter

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP)—Many Germans are getting the idea that people in America don't know or care how to cook. They just heat up canned foods. And late and movement in America are so fast it makes your head spin.

They are getting the "straight dope" from daughters and sisters who have married American soldiers and gone to the U. S. today.

Letters from German brides in America recently have been full of questions about how to cook. They are getting the "straight dope" from daughters and sisters who have married American soldiers and gone to the U. S. today.

Too Many Friends Delay Trial In Traffic Court

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP)—Arge Pion had a time getting a trial for a traffic violation because he had too many friends.

When his case came up, Deputy Prosecutor John Reiber said he couldn't take it because he was a friend of Pion's.

Another deputy prosecutor, A. Everett Bloom, said the same thing.

Judge John H. Logan said he couldn't sit and pass judgment because Pion was a personal friend.

Finally, Robert A. Buhler, an attorney, was sworn in as special prosecutor and Robert Berning, another attorney, sat in as special judge.

Pion was fined $15 for reckless driving.

Grossman, 26, who now lives with her husband on a farm at Hughes, Arkansas. "It isn't laziness," she wrote, "but only comes naturally because all you have to do is heat the food."

She also observed from Arkansas that "you have no idea about the speed with which people in this country move."

A former Nuremberg bank clerk wrote that she undertook the voyage to the U. S. with apprehension that she would encounter unfriendliness but that Americans she met on shipboard put her at ease and her in-laws welcomed her "heartily."

Living in Ohio she wrote, "The people here have a beautiful life. They get up early, eat well and wear lovely clothes. I'm very happy."

Even Susi Evans, 22-year-old former secretary now married to an American farmer in Roseboro, N. C., found things marvelous.

"Although Leon and I now live in one room, it is beautifully appointed," she wrote. "We have a new automobile like those we in Germany saw only in American picture magazines. My mother-in-law does the washing and ironing and won't let me do a thing. And speaking of ironing—I must tell you about that iron we have. Germans never saw anything like it. It has a little red light on the end and a special switch that one conceals for silks, woollens and linens."

If a member of a Navajo Indian family has a bad dream, the whole family often will move its home.

THE OLD HOME TOWN By STANLEY

Stanford Jolley Has Died 77 Times In 109 Movies

HOLLYWOOD (UP)—I. Stanford Jolley, veteran villain, has died 77 times in 109 movies by 40 different and ingenious methods. "Dying comes naturally to me now," he says. "I have more lives than a roomful of cats." One death Jolley will never forget was that in "The Ape." "I was standing outside the ape's cage, smoking a cigar," he said. "The ape, played by Jim Corrigan, reached between the bars and started to strangle me. In doing so, he jammed my cigar up my nose. "I couldn't smell anything for a month. Jolley, currently the heavy of Columbia's serial "Tex Granger," stopped off one day to see himself at a small town Saturday matinee. "The kids boomed me when I came to the screen," he said. "A little later I was killed and the entire audience stood up and cheered. Sure glad I'm not sensitive.

BROADWAY

By Jack O'Brian

NEW YORK—Picture of a former Police Reporter Scratching His Head: Wonder what ever happened to the delicate, lovely, lonely old lady who hopped out a twelfth-story window up on 101st Street years ago and got up and walked away. . . . She'd been brooding over the death of her husband, was discouraged because of an inability to learn English at her advanced age and decided to take the dry-jump was out when her money started to ebb.

She'd come from Europe, had suffered a stretch in a Hitler concentration camp and somehow had managed to get to New York. Just when things started looking bright after her years of cruel oppression they got black over on this side. . . . When she climbed out the window of her apartment house, she hadn't taken into consideration a deep fall of snow, or a high chicken wire fence in the churchyard which backed up against her apartment house, where kids played ball all summer. . . . She leaped, struck the wire fence, fell into deep snow and got up and walked away, looking for a doctor.

She suffered a cracked hip, and possibly a pelvis injury, but the doctor in the clinic into which she wandered, and where I subsequently talked to her through an interpreter, said she'd be up on her feet in a month or so. . . . I've wondered many times what happened to her, if she resolved her fears and troubles, and if she's any better off today, or whether she tried the leap again. . . .

She was a sweet, soft-voiced little lady of quiet culture and restrained refinement, whose story undoubtedly never will have a finale in my memory, just one of a which the doctor took one single stitch and saved the girl's life. . . . The little and the big things, foolish and wonderful, tragic and happy-ending, just memories.
