Scripture—I Samuel 18-20; II Samuel 1

After David had slain the Philistine giant, Goliath, King Saul took David into his own household, and Jonathan, Jonathan, and David became fast friends. Jonathan gave David his robe, girdle and bow.

Paul feared David, however, because the Lord was with him and the people loved him, and he sought to kill him. While David hid, Jonathan softened Saul's heart toward his friend for the time being.

Again fearing for his life, David hid, while Jonathan warned him by a pre-arranged sign. He shot the arrows beyond the boy who was sent to pick them up, and David fled once more into a long exile.

Years later the Philistines again attacked the Israelites, and Jonathan and David were killed, and David mourned deeply for his friend.

"New powerful poison found. One-quarter pound in water supply of city of 100,000 would kill all." This newspaper headline tells us that this new poison is the most lethal simple compound known to science.

Truly we have opened "Pandora's Box." To refresh your memory concerning "Pandora's Box," I give you the story briefly.

According to Greek mythology, Pandora was the first woman. After Prometheus stole fire from heaven and bestowed it upon mortals, Zeus determined to counteract this blessing, so he ordered a woman to be fashioned out of the earth, upon whom the gods would bestow various gifts. Epimetheus, the brother of Prometheus, married Pandora, Zeus gave her a magnificent box, the so-called "Pandora's Box," containing an assortment of evils and blessings. Epimetheus had her not to open the box, but she was persuaded to do so by the gods. In the absence of her husband, however, Pandora could not resist the desire to take a look into this mysterious box. She unlocked the cover and let the evils out. She had to close the box, which had opened, and she had to close the box, which had opened, and she had to close the box, which had opened.

Sometimes it looks as if our sins were never forgiven. It is all in the "Pandora's Box" and thrown it away. The only way to get rid of it is to get rid of it. The only way to get rid of it is to get rid of it.

Perhaps it is all in the "Pandora's Box" and thrown it away. The only way to get rid of it is to get rid of it. The only way to get rid of it is to get rid of it.

Truly we are going to need these

The Golden Gift of Friendship

INSPIRATION GAINED FROM THE LIFE OF JONATHAN

Scripture—I Samuel 18-20, II Samuel 1

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
IN THESE troublous times, when the world seethes with suspicion and animosity, and aggression casts its shadow on the future, it is good to contemplate the story of the fine friendship of two Israelitish youths—David and Jonathan. It is a tale of one of the greatest friendships in history of two men—one a simple shepherd lad; the other the son of the king.

Stories such as these renew our faith in mankind and his ultimate redemption, discounting the stories of crime, violence, sadism with which our minds have been saturated in the last decade and our souls sickened.

After David had slain the Philistine giant, Goliath, with his sling shot, and the enemies of Israel had fled, King Saul took the shepherd boy hero into his own royal household, where Saul's son, Jonathan, and David became fast friends. Jonathan, to show his friendship, "stripped himself of the robe that was upon him, and gave it to David, and his garments, even to his sword, and to his bow and girdle."

In spite of these honors, David behaved wisely and modestly. One day, however, the Israelitish women came out of the cities to greet the king, singing and dancing, but the words they sang did not please the King Saul: "Saul hath slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands."

Saul knew he had once angered the Lord, which made him jealous and suspicious that his throne might be taken away. The Lord, the king realized, was with this shepherd youth who had slain a giant and delivered Israel from her enemies. Therefore, jealousy, born of the women's words, and fear for his throne, made Saul hate David and determine to kill him.

Saul heaped honors on David, however, while he secretly planned his murder. He made David his son-in-law and when he saw that his daughter, Michal, David's wife, loved him, he hoped she would prove a snare by which to trap David to his death. She failed him, however. He also spoke to Jonathan and all the servants that he meant to kill him.

Jonathan told David to hide in a field and he would come there with his father and talk to him to find out how matters lay. David did so and when Saul and Jonathan came to the field Jonathan wrath in his fidelity to David, and suffered as a consequence. The relentless Saul pursued the exiled David from place to place, but never caught him.

At last, the Philistines attacked Israel again with a mighty army, and this time there was no David to help his people. In the terrific fighting Jonathan was killed and Saul sorely wounded.

Seeing his men flee from the Philistines and knowing the battle was lost, Saul commanded his armor bearer to kill him, but he refused so Saul fell upon his own sword and died.

When David heard the dreadful news he tore his clothes and wept, mourning for his friend. "My brother Jonathan, thy love to me was wonderful, passing the love of women," cried the stricken man.

Down the ages this friendship has been a beautiful legend and an ideal of friendship between two human beings. If the spirit of David and Jonathan should spread through the nations of the earth, that other ideal—world friendship—would be realized. Let us pray for it and work toward it.
