next session... and wanting to be with the winner... made the telephone lines leading to the Scott headquarters hot last week.

RECURRENCE OF 1936 — In 1936, Dr. Ralph McDonald came very close to defeating Clyde R. Hoey. Between the first primary and the second, the road contractors told Hoey they would see to it... money no object... that he would be nominated governor if he would let out Capus Waynick as chairman of the State Highway Commission.

But Waynick will not become the head of the highways if Scott is nominated. So, where do the contractors stand as of this second primary?

Rambling

(Continued from Page Two) ever saw one. We blinked but asked him to wait please. In about ten minutes... tall-and-slender Mr. Bessett from Atlanta... We asked him to wait please... and we let out for lunch. We never had the nerve to ask how the affair put unscrambled.

If faithful devotion will be rewarded, we will have the most beautiful cactus plant in captivity. At the present moment, though, one has to use a powerful imagination to see any future for the pathetic little sprout growing out of a red shoe. But too many times the ugly duckling has developed into a magnificent swan. Time will tell!

His hair was tousled and his face bore streaks of accumulated moisture and dirt... a combination found on many a young man's face. But he was a wild west man from the hip up... and he swung a mean pistol in our direction. We presume chaps and all the usual Western regalia was part of his make-up but the counter hid that from view.

Thief Can Go—She Wants Her Fruit Bowl

CLAREMORE, OKLA. (AP) Mrs. Gene Perrier forgave a thief for stealing a cake, a loaf of bread and some gelatine from her home.

"If you are still hungry, I'll fix something more to eat," she informed him through a local newspaper.

There was one condition to Mrs. Perrier's offer. The thief had to return a fruit bowl she treasured among her best.

others were remain unidentifiable. Here are some stories which illustrate the use of fingerprints filed with the FBI.

In August 1944 a mother living in the state of Washington, wrote the FBI that she had been separated from her son for 20 years. She had no word regarding him since he was four. She had no idea whether he was living or dead. She did, however, have a set of his fingerprints. Taken when he was three years old. These were searched through FBI files and identified with those of a young man who enlisted in the U. S. Navy at Des Moines, Ia., in 1941. The mother was advised and was able to locate her son.

During the war fingerprints performed an invaluable service in identifying bodies recovered under conditions making them unidentifiable by any other means. A case is that of an American soldier killed near the village of Sommesous, France, when a weapon carrier crashed. His unidentified body was buried in a grave marked unknown, but before burial the soldier's fingerprints were taken. When they reached Washington they were taken by the FBI with those taken at the time of the boy's induction.

A widely publicized case involving crime was that the "Black Dahlia" murder in Los Angeles last fall. The Los Angeles police had no way of identifying the mutilated body in the sadistic murder case. The victim was fingerprinted, however, and photographs of the impressions were transmitted by wire to Washington.

Fifty-six minutes after they were received by the FBI an identification was established with fingerprint cards already on file for the victim. These cards contained a full description of the murdered girl, together with a photograph and information as to her address and occupation.

HAND-TO-MOUTH

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — The dietitian at Florida State University says the dining hall is "just one jump ahead of the sheriff." The hall is operating on a day to day basis. With rising prices, Mrs. Anna Tracy says, the recent increase in price of the blue-plate special can't keep up with the grocer's bill.

D. GROVER NOLAND

Due to misplaced lines in the account of the funeral service for D. Grover Noland in the last issue of The Mountaineer, the information as published in the first paragraph was in leading.

The lines should have read as follows:

"Last rites were conducted yesterday morning at Garrett Funeral Home for D. Grover Noland, 61, native of Haywood County, and well known farmer of the Panther Creek section, who died early Tuesday morning at the Haywood County Hospital following a brief illness.

The Mountaineer regrets that the error occurred.
