

Body Of Haywood Marine Found After Three Years

First Lieut. Logan M. White's Body Found On Ryukyu Island In The Pacific

Exactly three years from the day his plane went down in a remote section of the Pacific, a letter was posted by the war department in Washington to report that the body of First Lieut. Logan M. White, Jr., USMCR, had been located.

Lieut. White was assigned to foreign service in the Pacific in April 1945, at the age of 23, and was serving on a carrier. On June 13, 1945, the message came that he had been killed in action on Ryukyu Island while on special mission June 8. Later a letter was received from Major Beasler in whose squadron Lieut. White was serving, giving full details of the tragedy, and stated that while on a mission Lieut. White was shot down by enemy anti-aircraft gun.

No further information was given, and his parents had dispaired of hope that his body would be found and returned for burial. He had been listed along with several other Canton men, as missing, and his name has been inscribed on the marker in the Memorial plot, recently set up by the local VFW post, as missing. The letter received by Mr. and Mrs. White a few days ago, states in part:

"A report has been received that a body previously buried as 'Unknown' in the U. S. Armed Forces cemetery, Okinawa, has been identified as your son, First Lieut. Logan M. White, Jr., U. S. Marine Corps Reserve."

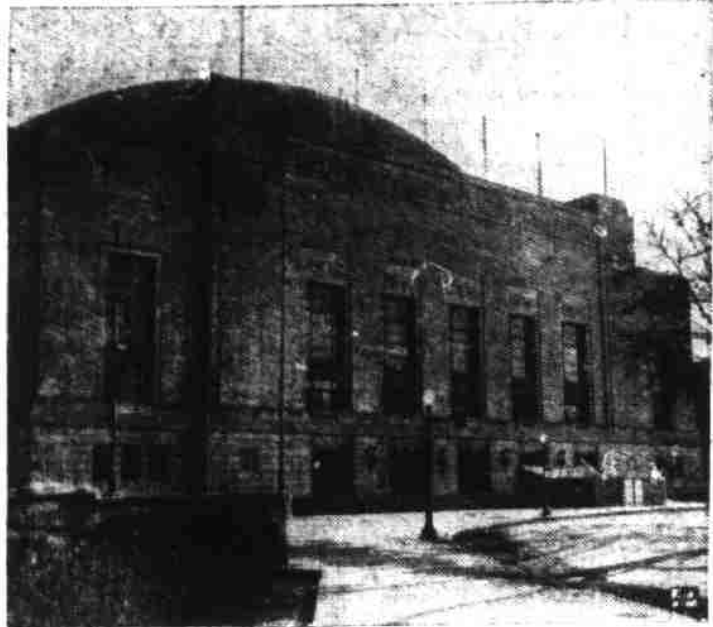

"Your son's remains were recovered from an isolated grave on Iriomote Shima in the immediate vicinity where he lost his life on June 8, 1945. The grave was marked in Japanese writing as follows: 'This is a monument of an American Airplane Soldier, 8 June 1945.'"

The application blank accompanying the letter, has been returned by Mr. and Mrs. White, requesting that the body be returned to them for re-burial here.

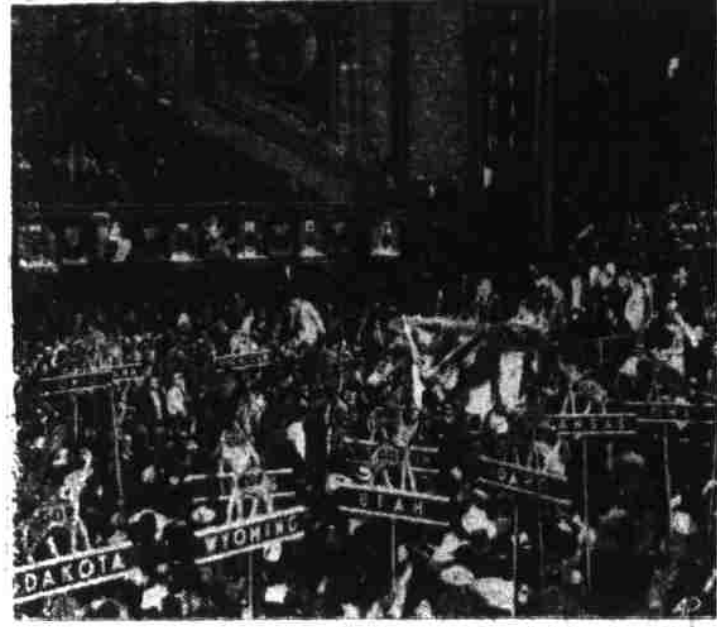

Soon after Lieut. White lost his life, news was received that his younger brother, Charles White of the U. S. navy, had died of disease in a hospital in England. His body also will be sent back for re-burial.

About four times as many men and boys are involved in farm accidents as are women and girls.

Timely Farm Questions

Question: What hybrid corn variety is recommended for silage?

Answer: For silage, the N. C. 26 variety is preferred. J. O. Lutz, Catawba County farmer, said he had used this variety and liked it better than the real silage corn. It gave him, on his land, from 18 to 20 tons of silage per acre.

Question: How should corn be spaced to produce 100 bushels per acre?

Answer: Earl Brintnall, Catawba County agent, received this query from a farmer, and here is his answer: "A little figuring might help out in this matter. It will require about 115 to 120 ears of hybrid corn to produce a bushel of corn. If you plant your corn in 3 1/2-foot rows, you will have to space it about 15 inches in the row in order to get 10,000 stalks to the acre. These 10,000 stalks should furnish you with enough ears to make 100 bushels or more."

Question: How can I maintain high quality in summer-time eggs?

Answer: Follow good management practices from nest to market. Produce infertile eggs. Gather eggs quickly, at least twice a day, and put them in a cool place. On the farm a well-ventilated, cool cellar is a good place to store them. Pack them in egg cases as soon as they are cool, and market them quickly, at least twice a week. A wire basket is a good container to gather eggs in if quantity is large. Store the home supply in the refrigerator. When taking eggs to market, keep them in the shade.

The potato is a native of South America and was found in North America as early as the 16th century.
