Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them! Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—a constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Of the cars rejected in the inspection Friday, many applied for a re-examination. Thirty-four of these passed on their second try. Seventeen were rejected again.

and outwalked them all. That's a pretty good record for a grandmother. Mrs. Roth's two sons are still amazed by their mother's stamina. That's one reason she wrote her book: "So that my grandchildren would understand what I did and not think I was just a funny old lady."

She's in Waynesville looking over the country around here, but is afraid she won't have much time for hiking. "I'll walk out to Lake Junaluska, maybe," she says. She has to return to Birmingham soon.

Mrs. Roth began her foot campaign over America twenty years ago in California. Some friends invited her and her small son to take a walk up a mountain with them. The bug hit her and she's been striding over the trails ever since.

"I just like to hop a bus for some place on the map, get out and start walking," she says. "A couple of summers ago I went up to New Hampshire to climb Mt. Washington, one of the highest mountains in the Eastern United States. I went up it by myself and beat the record by twenty minutes. But I wouldn't want to do that again. Never do anything twice, I say."

About eating, Mrs. Roth is a strict adherent to Bernard McFadden's health regime. She does not eat meat, especially pork. "Nothing but good vegetables for me," says the hiker.

Why can't most old people cavort about the mountains like she does? Mrs. Roth says it is because people smoke too much. "You find out after you've climbed a few mountains how much smoking hurts you." And riding in automobiles softens you, she says.

She's the lady who should know. Mrs. Roth has been up and down every hill around Asheville, she claims. Which climb does she remember most? "The trip up Pikes Peak," says Mrs. Roth. "I couldn't get anyone to go with me and it's 14,000 feet up there. You have to go up at night and come down the next day because there is no place to stay on top. Coming down a mountain lion began trailing me—I sure did hurry. I'll never forget the way he howled. It sounded almost human," she shivered.

Where does she want to go next? Mrs. Roth turns her head to one side and says, "Well—I've never been out of this country much. I'd like to go up to Alaska. They say you have to fly up there, and I don't care much for that. But I'll probably go next summer."

Of course, she'll be one year older next summer—a little further past 60. "Believe me," says Mrs. Roth, "years don't mean a thing. Not a thing."

MORE ABOUT Dr. Paul Hoon

democracy is a religious idea and a religious attitude. It is the fulfillment in history of the words of the Bible, "Blessed in that nation whose God is the Lord."

Dr. Hoon continued by saying, "For one thing, democracy is not something man has invented himself, but is an effort to make human government conform to God's law, especially moral law. The ideology makes man an end, not a means, and it calls us to have faith in human nature."

"Democracy," in the words of our definition, "is the faith that there are extraordinary possibilities in ordinary people." Democracy thus rests on two pillars, faith in God and faith in man.

"But if democracy rests on faith in human nature, we must remember that we are part of that human nature. Democracy depends for its success on the kind of person you and I are. The American ideology thus is not something merely written out on paper; it is above all something to be written in our hearts and lives. It is what we as individual citizens do and are. It is so to live, that if all America were to live as we live, America would fulfill the dream God has in store for us," he concluded.

The speaker was presented by Rev. M. R. Williamson, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Waynesville. Prior to the address, the High School band, under the direction of Charles Isley, had a band concert. The entire proceedings were broadcast over WHCC.

MORE ABOUT Rodeheaver

Young Rodeheaver was chosen the cheer leader for his university. An evangelist visiting in that region needed a song leader and engaged him for the job. That started him on his evangelistic career. Billy Sunday heard him coax a Chautauqua audience in Winfield, Kans., into such an outpouring of song, he decided he had found a song leader after his own heart. They worked together for 20 years.

Mr. Rodeheaver's outstanding work during the past few years has included a trip around the world, visiting all the leading mission fields. The aim was to find the best way to promote the music in foreign mission work. He has fulfilled a year's contract with the National Broadcasting Company, in addition to leading the singing for many noted groups and appearing on hundreds of radio programs.

Bells From All Over In Priest's Collection

NEWPORT, R. I. (UP)—Collecting bells from all over the world is the hobby of the Rev. Edward A. Higney, 80, pastor of St. Joseph's Catholic church. Father Higney began his collection some 25 years ago with the 50-cent purchase of a small hand bell in Gibraltar. He added another in Paris and after he had bought a third one in Quebec, a word circulated that he was a bell collector.

Since then he hasn't paid for a single chime and has received more than 300 bells as gifts from friends, relatives and strangers throughout the world.
