Naomi, Woman of Faith ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

There being a famine in the land of Israel, a man named Elimelech took his wife, Naomi, and his two sons to Moab, where there was food.
 The sons grew up and married Moabitess women; then Naomi's husband died and also her two sons, leaving the three women widows and childless.
 Naomi, probably homesick for her own land, decided to go back to her home town of Bethlehem, and Ruth, her daughter-in-law begged to go with her.
 Ruth eventually married a relative of Naomi's, and when Ruth's child was born, Naomi held him in her arms. MEMORY VERSE—Ephesians 4:32

State Baptist Workers Arrive Here Saturday
 Twenty-six workers from the state headquarters of the Baptist associational in Raleigh will arrive here tomorrow for the Haywood county Baptist revival.
 The workers will cooperate with local church people in making a survey of religion in this community. L. L. Morgan, state superintendent of Sunday Schools for the state, will arrive with the workers to direct the project.
 The Baptist churches of this county will send representatives to a meeting in the First Baptist church tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.
 At this initial meeting the workers will be organized for the survey and materials will be issued to the churches.

Sunday School Lesson

NAOMI, WOMAN OF FAITH

SHE CONQUERED SORROW THROUGH LOVE

Scripture—Ruth.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
 FAITH AND loving kindness are the themes of this lesson. Naomi, wife and mother, who, through love for her daughter-in-law and unfeeling kindness to her, renewed her own faith in the goodness of God toward her after her bereavement and grief therefore.

Our modern world, so full of hatred, rivalry, wrangles, intolerance and injustice, is so badly in need of kindness and love. Just simple human kindness could do so much to turn the bitterness and strife into peace.

Why do not people of all races and nations strive for understanding of one another, so that they can live together in tranquility? At the moment it seems as if this most desirable state never will be achieved, but we too must have faith that in God's own good time it will be accomplished.

We—the small people of the earth—must work toward it in our own lives, and small though our contribution may be—it will help, as the leaven in the dough leavens the whole mass.

Our story is told in the book of Ruth, but it is not Ruth who is

The three women started, but on the way Naomi told her daughters-in-law that they should go to their own people, each to her mother's house, marry again and have children. Orpah did as was suggested, after taking an affectionate farewell of Naomi.

Ruth, however, refused to leave her, protesting that wherever Naomi went, there she would go; that Naomi's God should be hers, and she called upon the Lord to witness that nothing but death would part the two.

When the two reached Bethlehem and people asked, "Is not this Naomi?" she answered bitterly, "Call me not Naomi, call me Mara; for the Almighty hath dealt very bitterly with me." Mara means "bitter."

It was the barley season in Israel, and when the grain was reaped, poor women were permitted to follow the reapers and collect what was left of the grain for themselves. Humiliating as it must have been for Ruth, she volunteered to go into a nearby field and gather the sheaves to support herself and Naomi.

The owner of the field where Ruth gleaned was a man named the heroine of our lesson—it is her mother-in-law, Naomi, whose name means "pleasant one," or "blessed one."

 The story starts in Bethlehem, which later became the birthplace of Jesus. It is situated five miles below Jerusalem. There lived a man named Elimelech, his wife, Naomi, and two sons, Mahlon and Chilion.
 There was a famine in the land, and Elimelech decided to leave his own country and take his family to Moab, where there was food. The Moabites were of the same stock as the Hebrews, a semitic race, descended from Lot. Their language was similar to Hebrew.
 Time passed and Elimelech died; the two sons grew up, and married Moabitess women, Orpah and Ruth. Evidently the widowed mother and the two sons and their wives formed a happy, united family.
 Sorrow struck this happy home again, however, when the two sons died, leaving the three women widows. Bereaved of husband and sons, Naomi longed for her old home, and decided she would go back to Bethlehem.
 Boaz, a distant relative of Naomi's and a very well known man in those parts.
 He noticed Ruth and ordered his men to treat her kindly and invited her to eat her lunch with his family and servants. He even told his men to purposely leave extra grain behind in their harvesting so that Ruth might take plenty home, for, he told Ruth, he had heard of her goodness to her mother-in-law.
 We have already studied the story of Ruth, and know how Boaz eventually married her so that her children could inherit Elimelech's property. The whole community seems to have approved of the marriage, and when Ruth had a son, Naomi's cup of happiness was full. When told that "thy daughter-in-law, which loveth thee... hath born him... Naomi took the child, and laid it in her bosom, and became nurse unto it."
 The baby was named Obed, and he was the father of Jesse and grandfather of David, therefore an ancestor of Jesus.
 Thus, love and faith conquered sorrow in this beautiful Old Testament story.

LOCAL COLOR
 There's everything from "Swing Your Mountain Gal" to the "Highlands Annals" on the new section of shelving of local material. If it is nature, rocks, birds, wild flowers or trees that interest you then perhaps the identification will be found in "Trees of the South", "Birds of North Carolina", or in "Wild Flowers".

If your interest is Handicrafts, then don't miss the map "Crafts of Southern Highlands" and the book "Handicraft of the Southern Highlands".

If you want to know about the Cherokees you might read the books "Old Frontiers", "Cherokee Nation", "Over the Blue Wall" and "The Cherokee and his Smoky Mountain Legends". You certainly will want to see the books by our own Miss Margaret Stringfield, "The Cherokee in Romance, Tragedy and Song" will give you the history from one whose ancestors were friends or Indians. "Ocoee-see, Maid of the Forest" is an operetta composed and written by Miss Stringfield. Parts of this operetta were presented over the Local Radio Station WHCC on Monday evening. Hope you heard it.

There are many more books about North Carolina-Tennessee Mountains, some on fishing, and "History of Haywood County". Maybe we didn't list your favorite, but you are welcome to come in and browse through the others.

The Everyday Counselor
 By—
 REV. HERBERT SPAUGH, D. D.

What are you living for? The Waynesville Mountaineer (N.C.) recently published an editorial, "A check-off list" in which were listed five things we all live for: (1) Money, (2) Knowledge, (3) Fame, (4) Pleasure, (5) Christ.

The editor added, "It is pretty easy to look the list over and put a finger on the item to which we are devoting most of our time and talents."

Four of these are fleeting, bring no lasting satisfaction, and end at the grave. Only one is enduring, Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, today and forever.

The world is starving today for goodness and personal righteousness. Our personal relations deteriorate for lack of it. True happiness eludes our grasp without God.

Waynesville is high in the Western North Carolina mountains. Here men have only to look about them to see the eternal hills, constant reminders of the grandeur of God's creation. The Psalmist wrote, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the mountains. From whence cometh my help? My help cometh from the Lord who made heaven and earth."

Perhaps you who read this may be happy and contented. If you have learned to bring your life in tune with God, you are happy, and you have found your place in life.

If you are not amongst these fortunate, if you have problems and difficulties which fill your mind and heart with confusion and fear, then lift up your eyes unto the mountains of God. The Almighty is ever ready to help in time of trouble and need. He has the answer to all of your problems. He will give the answer to you if you put your life into His hands.

In his great chapter on immortality, I Corinthians 15, St. Paul writes triumphantly, "Thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."
