Looks Like A Good Investment

No doubt one of the best investments that Asheville ever made was in the padlocks they are now using so freely in locking up places that should not be allowed to operate for the general good of the public.

The drive in Asheville against gambling seems to be getting results, as officers are closing places daily, and have others under scrutiny.

No doubt officers in other towns could use just as many padlocks in proportion to Asheville.

One sidelight of the drive that has made a special impression on us, is the manner in which police, rural police and highway patrolmen are checking on places during Saturday nights and Sundays to find people who are drinking too much to drive. This campaign is keeping a lot of drunken drivers off the highways, and protecting them as well as innocent victims.

The program underway in Asheville proves that while law violations cannot all be stopped overnight, they certainly can be greatly reduced.

Sounds Like Old Times

After discontinuing their summer assembly here for seven years, the Grand Council of North Carolina Masons will be back with us next month. This community back in the late thirties and early forties, always looked forward to this group coming here late in the summer and mixing business with pleasure during the assembly period.

The Masons have widely publicized this section, and more so since the Masonic marker was erected on the edge of the Park at Black Camp Gap, under the direction of the late Troy Wyche. The marker is built of stones from around the world, sent here by Masons from every corner of the globe.

The steps leading up to this marker will be dedicated the third day of the assembly next month, and we know it will be an impressive ceremony.

We trust the Masons get as much enjoyment out of coming here, as we do in having them.

MIRROR OF YOUR MIND

Does a wife who feels no emotion really love her husband?

Answer: She may love him very deeply, though it won't be easy for him to believe it. For her inhibitions do not grow out of her feeling toward him as a person; they are products of her whole experience of life, especially in childhood, and would have been just as strong, no matter whom she married, or how truly in love she was. But a happy marriage is nearly impossible under such conditions, and since "coldness" is a neurotic symptom, the best proof of love is a wife who suffers from it can give up and get herself cured.

Should a man take sides in his wife's quarrels?

Answer: As a rule, he's wiser not to. He will naturally want to protect her from actual injury or slander, but to take her part in every dispute out of mistaken loyalty will do her no good in the

Bountiful Haywood Crops

One cannot drive to any section of Haywood county without being impressed with the fine crops of tobacco and corn, while the apple crop seems to be plentiful, and of good quality.

The other cash crop in Haywood is beef cattle, and to see the thousands of head grazing the extra green pastures, and then look at the current livestock market, convinces one that the "live" cash crop will bring in a handsome return to Haywood farmers this fall.

From every angle it looks like a prosperous fall ahead for farmers of this county.

The recent rains have brought out the burley crop which a month ago looked very discouraging to everyone. The rains seemed to have come at the right time, and in sufficient quantity to do a lot of good.

The rains have done untold good to the corn crop, which seems to be above normal this year, with many of the members of the Haywood Corn Club striving for new high records in production. From the looks of many of the fields, there ought to be some that will get close, if not reach the 200-bushel-per-acre club this fall.

Flue-cured tobacco is bringing good prices and the records show that burley always runs a little higher than flue-cured, which would indicate about a 67-cent average for tobacco this fall and winter.

Basing the fruit market on the price of peaches, there is every reason to believe that apples will bring good prices this fall, and since Haywood has a better-than-average apple, this crop should prove valuable.

Taking everything as a whole, it looks like Haywood farmers are in for some big cash crops this fall and winter, and this is one of the things that make this county known as "North Carolina's Best Balanced county."

Hearty Haywood Baptist

The 63rd annual associational meeting of Haywood Baptists will get underway this morning for the first of five sessions today and tomorrow.

The program committee not only covered every phase of the word of the denomination, but brought in several outstanding men from throughout the state to take part on the program.

Baptists are great "meeters" and take a lot of pride in getting together and discussing plans and developments for the denomination. Right now the state Baptists have three summer assembly rounds, and the reports are that all are being patronized.

There are more Baptists in Haywood than any other denomination, approximately ten thousand.

There are over forty Baptist churches in the county, and practically everyone has a pastor. The Baptist of the county and the state are doing a good job, yet they readily realize the tremendous responsibilities, since so many thousands who are not in church have signified the Baptist church as their preference.

When building permits hit $72,000 for one month in a town the size of Waynesville, there is every reason to believe that there is plenty of building activity underway, or soon to get started.

Man has conquered many natural obstacles, but to date, no one has successfully combatted the elements in a light plane. Maybe someday, a further development of radar or something kindred will be found that will help solve this problem.

long run. In most cases, his personal bias will prevent his being really fair to both sides, and backing his wife when she is in the wrong will only help her make a worse mistake the next time. On the other hand, if he takes sides against her, she will be convinced he does not love her. Better let her fight it out for herself.

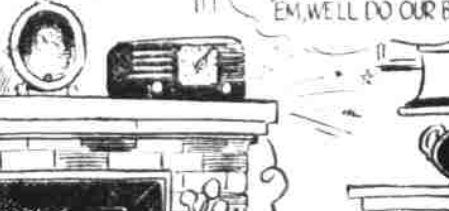

Can we train all men to the same mental level?

Answer: No, says a report in the Military Review, Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. A well organized training program can help anyone to function more efficiently, but will not "remove individual differences, nor will it materially change the rank of an individual in comparison with others exposed to the same training." Military (and civilian) leaders need to recognize that each man has his special gifts and limitations and try to assign to any individual, however well trained, the sort of work for which he is best adapted.

The irony of fate, it is said, is that as he slid the needle in the parking meter, "That's the last cent I have in change," he explained a moment later to the Courthouse parking meter man. An hour later he was heard that heart-breaking wail, the starter sending out the wail, "no spark... no go!"

There were two brand new Buicks, identical 1948 models, in front of a local hotel. One in taste and selection.

THE STRATEGY Don't

for all-out support of Truman, the Democrats start their hands of the Republicans. The strategy is now being discovered, it may hinge around some sort of tactical and congressional support for the president taking a seat. At least one strong supporter said last week that he would plead Truman's case in speeches he would be making in the future, for fear, he added, that to do so would injure the Democrats.

The shortage of pulp and acid wood is acute. County farmers and woodsmen are urged to increase production.

Noel Phillips is put in charge of distribution of Pet Dairy Products.

Two-motored army plane crashes on summit of Campbell's Knob near the Haywood-Jackson line. A sailor, who was a passenger on the craft, is killed.

After a breakfast of pineapple juice, scrambled eggs and bacon hot biscuits and coffee, the senators prayed and discussed the scriptures. The topic for the meeting was "Faith." It has been a weekly custom since 1943 these prayer meeting breakfasts at the capital.

Members of Congress get together to ponder ways and means of living amid the world's problems in a manner acceptable to God.

About 35 senators belong to the group, which meets under the leadership of Sen. Alexander Wiley (R-Wis.) in the Vandenberg Room across the hall from the regular Senate dining room in the Capitol building. Members from the House side meet in the same room every Thursday at 8:15 a. m., under the leadership of Rep. Ralph Gurnea (R-N. Y.). Rep. Vaughn Garris (D. Va.) is vice chairman, and Rep. Paul B. Dague (R-Pa.) is secretary-treasurer. There are some 67 members on the House breakfast roll.

There are about 35 of these breakfast clubs in the United States. Three of them, the Senate and House groups and another group for business are in Washington. The idea started in Seattle, Wash., in 1935 with a group of 19 business executives. The clubs functioned under the National Council for Christian Leadership.

Abraham Vereide, who came to this country in 1905 from Norway, was graduated from Northwestern University and was a minister for some years, is international director. According to members of the congressional clubs, Mr. Vereide's idea is that the first step in over-reform is an individual reform. He devotes all his time now to the breakfast clubs and has his offices in Washington. The clubs are non-partisan and non-denominational. Members do not pay dues, and there is no big money-raising for the club's work, though members help by private contributions.

Not all members attend every meeting. Sometimes there is only a handful, but on the whole they are pretty faithful. Ralph, head man of the Senate restaurant, who is always an interested spectator, says that during the closing days of the regular session the members spend a couple of weeks discussing housing on the basis of their responsibilities as Christians.

"The members don't seem to care much for publicity," Ralph told me. "They consider this all a more or less spiritual retreat from the cares of the day. The services are between themselves and their God and are more or less private affairs."

CREDITS NEWSPAPER WITH HELPING "SELL" PISGAH

Editor The Mountaineer

I wish to thank you for the nice article and editorial concerning my leaving Pisgah National Forest. I have appreciated your fine help and cooperation though I have not shown it very well. The work of your newspaper has really sold Pisgah to the public and it had not been for the police trouble this year, we would have had a million recreationists enjoying the facilities of this Forest this year.

I trust I will see you before I leave here for Philadelphia and will try to bring Bill Duncan by to meet you. I am sure you will like Mr. Duncan and the two of you carry on a fine program for Pisgah.

Sincerely,
W. W. Bill HUBER,
Ranger, Pisgah National Forest.
