breeding in his dairy herd, and is now building up the breed of polled Guernseys. He sells milk to Pet here, and is a charter member of the Haywood County Milk Producers Association.

There are nine children in the McCracken family. Four of the children are now at home, and five are married and maintain homes of their own. Of the four at home, one is a student at North Carolina State College, and the other three are attending grade and secondary schools in the county. Four of the five married children have a college education.

Mrs. McCracken taught in the rural schools of Haywood for ten years. Mr. McCracken attended a session of summer school in agriculture at the University of Tennessee.

Family life on the McCracken farm is excellent. They have all the conveniences that could be had in a city, including refrigeration, running water, baths, washing machine, electric lights, and many other conveniences that go a long way to better home life. All of these facilities were added since Mr. McCracken was taken on as a demonstration farmer. This family has always shown a great interest in movements for the betterment of agriculture and country living, and have supported such movements. This family sets an example of neighborliness, friendliness and cooperative spirit — if it is indeed a "Master Farm Family."

Every Section Of County Contributed To Bookmobile

With the new bookmobile already being primed for operation in about ten days, the campaign to raise funds for a rolling library in Haywood county was more than successful, according to a report by Margaret Johnston, librarian.

The campaign, which started last February and was climaxed by the arrival of the new bookmobile last week, was aimed to raise $3,000. When the totals were added by Miss Johnston, the fund had raised $3,160.31.

The bookmobile, with a capacity of 800 books, will bring the library facilities to every area of Haywood county. Miss Johnston is busy now, readying the rolling library for operation and arranging a schedule. She said that the unit should be ready to go very soon and, in the meantime, it will be present for demonstrations at civic club meetings, farm groups and district teacher meetings.

MORE ABOUT Haywood Cattle

cattle would result in a steadier profit for the owner, he said, because they can be carried over until the market is suitable for selling.

"The Hereford cattle raised here are larger than those grown in the wide open spaces of Texas," declared Mr. Stone. "I thought Texas was Hereford country, but this beats it."

Mr. Stone has an extensive life background of cattle production backed up by what he says local people listen when he talks because he knows the subject. Since he left his birthplace in central Illinois, he has spent 50 years growing, selling and managing cattle markets.

He was one of the far-sighted men who helped put the FFA bill across. "I spent a whole winter in Washington getting that bill put through," he stated.

He was in charge of food production during the World War I and really had a job on his hands, "feeding the world." Mr. Stone has been active in the largest cattle raiser's organizations in the country, and is currently editing a full-sized magazine on the subject. "We're going to have 64 pages in this issue," he said. "You know that means work, because I have to write nearly all of the material myself."

Mr. Stone backs up most of his declarations on cattle raising with verses and stories from the Bible,

High Price of Timber
The market value of the 588,526,000 board feet of timber cut out of the national forests the past year was $2,846,505, an all-time high. The average price paid by bidders for this type of timber rose to the record peak of $4.84 per thousand board feet, highest average price the forest service ever received and 12 per cent higher than the previous year. Although demand for saw timber is unprecedented, sound forest management on a sustained-yield basis is gaining ground.

and he is particularly fond of referring to Abraham, one of the first cattle men.

All his life, Mr. Stone said, he has built up cattle markets in this country. But Haywood and Western North Carolina has the finest soil and climate he has found for the industry.

And Mr. Stone is a man who knows.
