

Shoved Politicians To Solve Problems

W. BRUNE, president of the city council, said that the council has little to do but to shove politicians around and get them to solve the city's problems.

"We found that many citizens of political expediency has been built up over a period of years," Maiden Jones, secretary of the citizens council, said.

"Tickets were fixed. Parking violators were fined a nickel. People who were in were granted special parking permits and reserved parking places."

"Some of us were politicians. We had no worry about losing votes. We told people straight from the shoulder what was what."

Steps Taken

This is what the council has done:

1. Traffic tickets no longer are fixed. The council has become a watchdog of ticket records.
2. Parking fines have been increased to $1 and $2 instead of five cents.
3. The number of special parking permits has been cut in half.
4. "Reserved" parking places have been eliminated.
5. Angle parking has been eliminated.
6. Funeral directors are required to furnish their own escorts and police who formerly were used now are free for other duties.
7. The city has started to test the idea of "raining" stop lights to speed the flow of traffic.

"Some people were so surprised when they couldn't fix a ticket that they fought the case instead of paying a $1 fine," Jones said.

"They got a bigger surprise when the case ended up with $20 fines."

"Now they just pay up the first time."

GREEK KING REVIEWS HIS 'REPENTANT REDS'

KING PAUL OF GREECE SALUTES when, with Queen Frederika and members of his entourage, he reviews at Athens the newly-formed battalion of repentant Communists from Macedonia's Island. This is the fourth battalion to be formed of former Reds. The ceremony was climaxed by the presentation of a flag to the new unit. On the King's left is General Yantos, chief of the Greek General Staff. On Queen Frederika's right War Minister George Stratos (wearing white suit) is an interested observer. (International)

HOLLYWOOD A.P. The tricks that directors use to milk emotions from their actors have ranged from an off-stage gunshot to the crying violinist hired for every movie Florida Bara scene.

Since Jackie Coogan was knee high to a chair, directors have told children sad stories to make them cry, right down through the time of Baby LeRoy, Shirley Temple and Margaret O'Brien.

Some directors still startle with an off-stage gunshot at the precise moment when he should be startled. That worked better in silent pictures, because now the noise has to be erased from the sound track.

Others cry, tear their hair, or stand in front of the actor making faces. A few, like John Ford, use psychology.

Ford, winner of three Academy Awards, is a past master of what he calls "pointed indirection."

During filming of "The Three God-fathers" in California, blustering hot Death Valley, he tracked Ward Bond into looking his meanest in showering sarcasm on him.

Pedro Armendariz and Harry Carey, Jr., gave performances that were the acme of sultering after Ford walked them through a sand storm.

John Wayne appeared in trial court as the most wretched, all-around case criminal ever to face a judge. In the Arizona picture for M-G-M release, co-produced by Ford and Merian C. Cooper, Wayne plays a bank robber and saves a baby's life on the desert.

When time came for him to plead his case, Ford told Wayne not to use the lines he'd learned. He had to stammer and stutter through his answers to the judge's questions.

War-time destruction of trees has sharply reduced potential exports of walnuts from North China.

MISSISSIPPI CATFISH GET DRINKS ON UNCLE SAM

ST. LOUIS, EP. The seven-month project played by the Old Man River and the Mississippi catfish have when federal inspectors finally pick up the muddy water, with rain.

Between 1930 and 1935, 100,000 tons of fish were piled up in the river. It was shipped here from the Azores Islands during the war but went unclaimed because of the heavy import tax.

After failure to dispose of the 130 to 140,000 tons of fish at auction, Collector James H. Wade ordered the 225 barrels of fish poured into the river because it had been designated the government warehouse here.

BUTTERFLY POST BUILT

FAYES CITY, EP. Harold E. Strauss and Albert Isom, father, have been granted a patent on a device designed to save labor on the farm. It is a clothed fence post so constructed that an insulator for electric fencing can be attached without tool, merely by inserting the specially-built insulator in the slot.
