

Toothaches May Be Eliminated If Rules Are Kept

SEATTLE (UP)—Toothaches are old-fashioned. That is the opinion of Dr. John C. Brauer of the University of Washington school of dentistry, a leading authority on children's dentistry.

Dr. Brauer said older folks can't always be spared from aching molars because of past habits, but few children would experience dental pain during their lives if they practiced preventive measures now known to dental science.

The dentist's factors are what the child eats and how his teeth are cared for. Dr. Brauer said "Hereditary" has little to do with dental decay.

He lists five major points in the protection of children's teeth: 1—A child should visit the dentist before he is three years old.

Do This for Head-Cold Stiffness!

Frank Sinatra Map Appears At Copacabana Show

NEW YORK—Bert Lahr writes that he's doing wonderfully on the road with "Burllesque", its second season and a real bonanza for Bert, whose faith in the old play has been eloquently upheld. Lew Parker writes from London that he's doing dandy in vaudeville although the revue he went over for in the first place (starring Jessie Matthews) folded fast. Lew may play the lead in the British carbon of "High Button Shoes", now that the writers and producer of that Broadway smash have settled their furious squabble. Jack Hylton will produce it in London.

Hoagy Carmichael returned from London and will tie off on a concert tour, quite a step up in the formal music world for Hoagy, who always considers himself an upright piano and saxophone-on-the-floor-style entertainer. Parks Johnson says he'll retire from radio and his "Vox Pop" network pitch, which he owns. Jimmy Durante is here doing the town and making up his mind whether to take a Broadway show, do his radio program from New York and/or take a six-week Copacabana engagement after Jan. 1.

Eddie Duchin will delight a whole new set of debutantes when his new orchestra opens the Waldorf's winter supper club season. Featured floor show folk in the exclusive Park Avenue rooming house will be Peter Lind Hayes and his beautiful wife, Mary Healy.

Peter was starred in "Heaven on Earth", a musical comedy which opened at the Century Theater and was pronounced strangely shy of either music or comedy, a rough fix for any such show to be in. Paul Draper will hop and pirouette, plus skip and an entrechat or two, when the Persian Room's season starts. Rosalind Courtright is the singing feature, and she's not singing for her supper, exactly, for her husband's wealthy West Coast hotel. Add Frank Sinatra as a possibility for the Copacabana floor show just before or after Durante appears, when and if.

Marjorie O'Brien stopping traffic in the Waldorf lobby, and then off to the Club Room of the Stork Club for a soda. Trader Tom's Steak House just off Broadway has had a sign on the wall since it opened nine months ago proclaiming "ten percent off to all patrons wearing ten-gallon hats." Sheriff Ray E. Vincent of Las Vegas doubled in the other evening, pardoned and didn't know a thing about his ten-gallon thrill until he asked for the bill and the ten per cent was deducted. The Sheriff was the first such guest wearing a sombrero to be seen on the premises, even though it's operated by a syndicate including western cattlemen. Seems the Westerners pick their multi-gallon skimmers and gaudy rigging when they drop by their New York headquarters.

CHIEF SPURNS PAY BOOST NORMAN, Okla. (UP)—Police Chief J. W. Wheeler doesn't want a salary increase. He protested a $50 hike on the ground that it wouldn't be fair to other department heads. Wheeler says he likes Norman and has been "more satisfied here than any other place I have lived in my life."

Nina Warren Campaigns At Home

Wife of Republican Vice-Presidential Candidate Assumes Housewife Role for Husband's Comfort

By W. A. WELLS AP Newsfeatures

SACRAMENTO, Calif.—Mrs. Earl Warren will play an important role in her husband's vice-presidential campaign.

She will accompany Governor Warren on his swing around the country by special train. She probably will make rear platform appearances but, following her long established custom, plans no public talks or statements.

Throughout Warren's public career, Mrs. Warren has kept religiously in the background. He waged his campaigns—some of them quite strenuous—by which he climbed, without defeat, from an Alameda county deputy attorneyship to the governorship (twice elected) and to his party's choice as the running mate for Governor Dewey of New York, Republican standard bearer for President.

Mrs. Warren impresses you with the unpretentiousness of her conception of her role in the governor's public life. It has been merely that of a devoted wife, a mother and his companion. She sees her duty as consisting of making his home life pleasant, "a place to relax and rest from the cares of the day."

"Politics is his field and in that field he makes all the decisions," she says. "My field is our home and it is there I strive to make my real campaign contribution. I do this by seeing to it my candidate can relax whenever possible and spend such spare moments as he may wish with the children."

Close friends know however that Nina Palmquist Warren contributes more to her husband's political career than just that. She stands shoulder to shoulder with him spiritually, with confidence in him and his judgments. She gives him the encouragement he needs. "I always know," she has said, "that whatever he decides is the thing he feels is the right thing to do."

The Warrens are a closely knit family. There are six children of whom five still live at home. Mrs. Warren throughout their married life always has had more to do than merely supervising a staff of servants.

She usually has found time to take a personal hand in the preparation of the children's school lunches and to watch over the youngsters' dress, social activities and their sports.

Frequently she still invades the kitchen to make Swedish pancakes, the lamb stew of which her husband is particularly fond, or to bake a cake for family birthdays or as a gift to friends. She is a devotee of the art of flower arrangement and is painstaking in doing the floral decorations for formal occasions. Neither motherhood nor household cares have robbed Mrs. Warren of her prettiness, grace or charm. She is blue-eyed, light complexioned with an auburn tint to her hair, dimpled and equally as photogenic as her handsome husband.

The two met at a breakfast party in Oakland. A two-year courtship was followed by an engagement period. They were married in Oakland, Oct. 14, 1925, in a Baptist church. This was after his appointment as district attorney of Alameda county but before his first campaign resulting in his election to the office.

Mrs. Warren, then Nina Palmquist Meyers, a widow with a small child, had been office manager of an exclusive women's dress shop, which may help account for her choice of apparel and ability to wear clothes becomingly. She was born in Gutland, Sweden, the daughter of a Baptist minister, and was brought to the United States as an infant by her parents who first settled in San Diego and then moved to Oakland.

Warren also has the blood of the Scandinavian peninsula in his veins. His father, Mathias H. Warren, was brought to this country from Norway in infancy.

Mrs. Warren's business experience likewise is reflected in her fondness and adeptness in keeping a family budget.

"I fully believe," the governor said recently, "Nina has a record of every household expense since we were married. She is an excellent home manager and keeps track of all expenses, even since we have occupied the gubernatorial mansion. She takes great pride in her budgeting and is very conscientious about it. She is so good at it I think she could tell you where almost every dollar has gone for household expenses throughout the years."

A brief talk with Governor Warren reveals how high Mrs. Warren stands in the esteem of her husband and the children, as the family mentor, helpmeet, mother and cook.

"Our friends say," the governor will tell you with an assumption of modesty, "that she is really a superb cake baker. Did you know that her recipe for chocolate cake has been printed and widely circulated by a culinary publishing company?"
