

Forgotten Years Of Childhood Are Between 6 and 12

The Forgotten Years of Childhood. That's what Clara Lambert, Director of Teacher Education at the Play Schools Association, calls the ages between 6 and 12.

These are the forgotten years, she explains, "because Johnny and Mary have lost the charm of babyhood and have not yet acquired the bloom of the teenager. Children of this age are not so lovable as they were at three, nor so exciting as they are in adolescence."

The inner world of the 6-to-12-years olds is hard to get at. And because they are elusive years and at times baffling, she has just written a 32-page illustrated pamphlet, "Understanding Your Child—Ages 6 to 12," issued by the Public Affairs Committee, Inc. of New York.

For dealing with children in this difficult phase of growth, Mrs. Lambert offers the following suggestions to be used, not as an infallible guide but on-the-spot emergencies, but for long-term guidance in helping your child to develop fully.

1. Know what to expect beforehand. Be prepared for questions about sex, "shockers," tall tales, lies or stealing.

"Shockers" are best handled with humor and a light touch, and a simple, direct, honest answer without a display of shame, confusion or anger.

When a child lies, he may be afraid of punishment or of losing your love. Relax your demands, make him feel sure of your love and understanding, no matter what happens.

Stealing is usually brought about because there is not enough adventure in your child's life. Give him more things to do and more attention.

2. Keep talking things over together. Reading stories is one way to have little "talk tests" which lead to understanding.

3. Encourage dramatic play, even though it is often a noisy, dirty, highly emotional activity, for it is through play that children work out their own problems.

4. Share experiences with your child. Experiences shared with you provide richer play material than a closetful of toys.

5. Don't make too many rules and regulations. You children want rules, laws and regulations, but they like the "rubber band" type which can be stretched a little but not broken. You must know how to compromise gracefully, be firm without rancor, be fair, and even look the other way sometimes to sidestep an unimportant issue.

Music Hath Charms To Still Jumpy Nerves

Your ear can make you forget what is happening in the rest of your head, according to Dr. John M. Jepson, Los Angeles dentist.

Dr. Jepson finds that by placing a sound conductor on the patient's head, and allowing him to regulate the volume of music with a dial on the arm of the chair, the patient gains a marked ability to withstand pain.

The kind of music played makes a difference, too. A jazz addict would get little comfort from a symphony, no matter how loud, while classical music fans would still feel all the pain, and perhaps more, if jazz music were played.

Elks' Ruler Finds Two Jobs Conflict

BISMARCK, N. D. (U.P.)—A problem seldom encountered was tossed at Bill Kunz, prominent civic leader here.

As Exalted Ruler of the local Elks lodge he was entitled to present a $16,100 check for improvements at the municipal swimming pool—to himself as president of the city park board.

Rather than transfer the check from one hand to the other and whisper a speech of thanks, he prevailed upon the Elks' board of trustees chairman to present the check.

Ex-Marine Trains Boxing Kangaroo

JAMESTOWN, N. Y. (U.P.)—Lorin E. Wilcox and Joe, the Roo, make quite a pair.

Wilcox is a 31-year-old 145-pound ex-Marine. Joe is a 45-pound baby kangaroo Wilcox brought home from Australia. They're sparring partners.

In about a year, Wilcox hopes to have Joe ready to stage public bouts. He already has bought him white boxing gloves and says Joe has developed a "powerful" punch. Joe trains by hopping about the room, stopping occasionally for a handshake or a pat.

In addition to the gloves, Joe also is getting fur-lined kangaroo-leather shoes to keep his feet warm in upstate New York's snowy winter weather. There isn't any snow where Joe comes from.

TERMITES WRECK RELIC

BEVERLY, Mass. (U.P.)—The Balch House, pride of the Beverly Historical Society, has been undermined by termites. The society says it will cost $4,000 to repair the damage. The house was built in 1638. It is the oldest house in the United States of which there is a written record, the society says.

HORSESHOES WITHOUT NAILS

CHICAGO (U.P.)—Science has devised a new method of shoeing horses without using nails. A plastic glue developed by an Ohio inventor holds horseshoes on so securely they can be removed only with a saw. The American Veterinary Medical Association reports.

African Tree Grows Sausage-Like Fruit

LOS ANGELES (U.P.)—Squirrels love it, but you'd probably get a stomach ache if you ate the fruit of a sausage tree, according to University of California at Los Angeles botanists.

The long, green, salami-shaped fruit of the native African tree look like gourds and sometimes grow 18 inches long. But they only look like sausages and aren't good eating, said Dr. Mildred Mathkias of the UCLA botany department.

Dr. Mathkias states, however, that squirrels in Africa cut down the fruit, nip off the end, and let the inside ferment before eating it.

Three UCLA specimens were brought from Hawaii and two are now covered with 40 or 50 "sausages." A sign is posted to caution students not to pick the fruit.

The botanical name for the sausage tree is Kigela Pinnata, and in

Three-Fourths Of Tar Heel Youths Fail Army Exam

More than three-fourths of the Tar Heel youths called for pre-induction examinations have failed to make the grade, but State Selective Service officials yesterday were neither surprised nor alarmed.

"It's just about what we'd expected," a spokesman said. "The age groups we've called up so far were pretty well combed clean of qualified boys in the last draft."

The State has been assigned three quotas since the new Selective Service Act became effective. In December, the national quota was 15,000 and North Carolina's 518. The latest call, issued last week to meet stepped-up needs for the army, will bring 20,000 youths to examination centers in January, with 683 to come from North Carolina communities.

At present the local boards are working with youths born before September, 1927.
