When you see a mother who has a child who is ill, you know she needs a father. When you see a mother who has a child who is ill, you know she needs a father. When you see a mother who has a child who is ill, you know she needs a father.

John McCourt sniffs audibly when Lucinda gives details of her mother's love. Lucinda says that nowdays many a perfectly good doll is repaired, replaced by some other creature with more advanced features. He says the only time he has ever really injured a doll was when he repaired one for a 12-year-old boy.

The boy's mother had died. John says. "About the only thing she left behind was a big old doll with a cracked plaster head. He brought it to me and when I told him how much it would cost to fix it, the big tears began rolling down his cheeks. He said he only had a dollar, offered to do any kind of work for me if I'd only please fix it."

"I'll never forget the look on that kid's face when he saw the completed job. He picked it up and danced around the shop with it, burning it to him. Mind you, he was a big, burly boy and not a kid." He danced around and around and then he held the doll out to me and started bawling. "I love it, I love it, I love it," he said. "I love it, I love it, I love it." Then he sat down on a bench and held the doll on his knees a long time. He just sat there looking out the window and holding the doll."

John McCourt says more dolls need fathers like that. The mothers are getting too hickie for his taste.

NOW, WHAT? WE DO? Asks "mamma" Sandra Godby, explaining ailment of her baby Suzanne doll to doll nurse Joan at the McCourt doll hospital. Denver Baby has plastic kidneys, won't drink bottle.
