

MORE ABOUT County Library

Library was enabled to start county-wide service through the state aid fund, together with appropriations from the county and the town of Waynesville. A total of $500,000 has been asked for state aid to public libraries this year in an effort to bring the average up to one-half book per capita.

Miss Johnston, secretary of the North Carolina Library Association, journeyed to Raleigh last week to appear before a joint session of the General Assembly to testify for passage of the library aid bill.

Hospital Branch

For the past two years on each Wednesday afternoon the library is closed, but Miss Johnston and her assistant, Mrs. James Atkins, Jr., do not have the afternoon off. This is the afternoon when the library officials deliver books and magazines to the Haywood County Hospital. Mr. Ben Colkit has been assisting in distributing the books throughout the hospital on a book truck which was donated by the nurses for that purpose. A total of 2,277 books were circulated at the hospital during the past year.

Another branch of the Haywood County Public Library service is a Negro branch at Pigeon Street School. The branch was established two years ago and the circulation this past year totaled 2,985 books. The library is now beginning to buy books of its own for the Negro branch. Marlan Camp Howell is contributing voluntary service as leader for library service at the Pigeon School.

The advancement in children's work has been one of the outstanding features during the past five years. In 1944 little over 2,000 books were circulated among children. Last year the figure soared to 16,000, including all services of the library.

Summer Reading Clubs One of the chief reasons for the increased children interest has been the summer vacation reading program. The three reading clubs held last year were: Cherokee Indian Club, Blue Ridge Billy and Travel Reading Clubs. These clubs are based on topics of local interest and have stimulated more reading among children of the county.

When Miss Johnston took over here as county librarian, the Haywood County Public Library was open for two hours in the afternoon. As soon as county service was started the hours were from 1 to 5 o'clock. Five years ago there was no heat or sitting space in the children's room. Back then, persons desiring to renew their books must come to the library. But now they may be renewed by telephone, capably accomplished, along with post card or by telling the libra-area's quota. The drive officials have been pleased with the dime-board results and it will continue to operate through Saturday.

Funds are now being collected at the Strand and Park Theaters by members of the Beta Sigma Phi sorority.

A report this morning from Berkman Huger, general co-chairman in the county, indicated that Canton will reach its $6,500 quota before the campaign closes Monday afternoon January 31.

Mr. Ledbetter reported that the Lions Club fattened the funds by donating a $100 check.

A number of tentative projects were discussed and a general outline of plans for the coming year made by the board.

One of the biggest problems facing the county library is the lack of sufficient space to house the present books on hand. There is not enough adequate space to work with children or clubs of the county. At present there is no space to unload the bookmobile.

During the past five years, the library here has borrowed between 4,000 to 5,000 books from the library commission. The library is now using around 1,000 of these books to assist on the new bookmobile service.

The first book list that was published by the library in April, 1944 were all borrowed books from the North Carolina Library Commission. Today most all of the books appearing on the reading list are owned by the county library.

The Waynesville Women's Club will give a Silver Tea at the library on February 7 and all proceeds will go for new lights in the adult room.

One cannot read the report of the five years of progress under Miss Margaret Johnston without pointing a finger of pride to the commendable job which she has so capably accomplished, along with her fine staff of assistants.

Frankfurter Treat

By CECILY BROWNSTONE Associated Press Food Editor

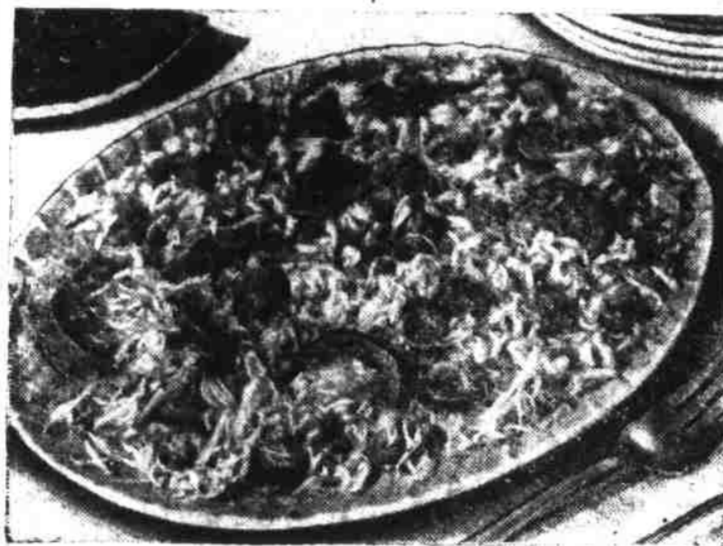

If there's anything that tastes better than frankfurters and sauerkraut on a cold winter night, I don't know what it is! But if you want this good old combination to have extra flavor then try the following recipe in which they team up with tomatoes and caraway. Fresh tomatoes are called for in the following recipe but it's quite possible to use whole canned, drained tomatoes, too.

TOMATO SAUERKRAUT SUPREME

Ingredients: 3 frankfurters, 1/4 cup diced onion, 3 tablespoons butter or fortified margarine, 2 tomatoes, 3 cups sauerkraut, 1/2 teaspoon caraway seeds. Method: Cut

STUFFED FRANKFURTERS

Ingredients: 9 bacon slices, 2 cups soft bread crumbs, 1/3 cup chopped onion, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/8 teaspoon pepper, 1/2 teaspoon sage, 9 frankfurters. Method: Partly cook bacon; drain on brown paper, reserving fat. Mix together bread crumbs, onion, salt, pepper, sage
