Barker Is Tenth Actor To Portray Tarzan On Screen

By GENE HANDSAKER HOLLYWOOD-"Tarzan's Magic Fountain" is a poor man's 'Lost Horizon," plus mythology's formtain of youth, with trees, vines, leopards, owls, human skeletons. and a remarkable chimpanzee called Cheeta.

Cheeta steals this, the twentyfifth Tarzan picture in the past 30 years. Actually Cheeta (supposed to be a she) is a male chimp named Harry. In the picture he chews bubble gum, shakes his head to indicate "no," and paces solemnly with hands behind back, after the similarly pacing Tarzan. Cheeta and another chimp whisper into each other's ears and clasp each other in terror at the proper moments. They're trained by Albert Antonucci, former monkey-teacher at the St. Louis Zoo, for the oncea-year Tarzan pictures.

Lex Barker, the tenth actor to play Tarzan on the screen, is highly acceptable as the jungle's streamlined man of muscle.
