LET FREEDOM RING

Artist concept of the drafting of the Mecklenburg Declaration. By its adoption on May 20, 1775, the people of this North Carolina county became the first in America to declare themselves independent of foreign rule.

The State flag that floats over North Carolina's capitol in Raleigh bears on its two dates, May 20, 1775, April 12, 1776. On the initial date, the people of Mecklenburg county meeting in Charlotte were the first in America to declare themselves free and independent people. The second date marks the day on which the Convention directed the North Carolina members in the Continental Congress to vote for separation from England.

Yes, independence took root in North Carolina. No wonder that attention involving personal liberties is especially carefully here. Tolerance not prejudice. Mutual respect for the other fellow and individual rights. That's the way to obtain this heritage of freedom which is to enjoy and to uphold in North Carolina.

Johnny Farrell, left, "chooses sides" with Joe DiMaggio and Gene Sarazen during visit to Miami Beach's La Gorce Country Club. After his first "lesson," DiMaggio shot 124 against Buddy Hassett's 105. It was DiMaggio's second time on links.

Farrell, who played in his first U. S. Open in 1920 at Toledo's famous Inverness course, recalls that whenever he and Sarazen came down to the final rounds of a tournament they would agree to split their earnings.

"I recall playing in the La Gorce final with Gene in 1923," said Farrell soon after showing DiMaggio how to grip a golf club. "It was a $15,000 tournament, the largest purse ever played at the time. I beat Sarazen and we split the $5,000 first prize."

The debutant Farrell got his start in golf at the age of 14 at Swarday in Mount Vernon, N. Y. He was just a caddy making $8 a week. A year later he could break 80.

He now has visions that his sons will follow in his footsteps.
