Food Bills Don't Wait

BOSTON, (UP)—When Salvatore DeMare, 24, arraigned for non-support of his family, explained that he was a tomato packer "and this is the dull season," Municipal Judge Jennie L. Baron said: "There's no reason for you to wait for the tomatoes to grow before going to work."

That is the reason why it is almost impossible to escape infection permanently.

"Although measles is a serious disease, and there is still no effective way of preventing its occurrence permanently, we do have a means of preventing serious complications, and thereby reducing the dangers when it does occur. "It has been noted that, in 1938, there were 251 deaths from this disease. Since that year, there has been a noticeable decline in deaths. In spite of the fact that there has been no definite reduction in the number of cases, this decline in deaths has been due to two developments: The first is the discovery of sulfa drugs and penicillin for treatment of pneumonia and similar complications of measles, and the second is the use of serum for small children. This serum is taken from persons who have had the disease. Since the globulin part of the serum is used, it is usually spoken of as immune globulin. Parents can do much to reduce the danger from measles in their children by consulting their physicians or health departments regarding the use of immune globulin.

Drivers' License Taken From 960 Motorists In Feb.

During February, a total of 960 motorists lost their driving licenses for practices detrimental to highway safety, the Motor Vehicle Department has announced.

Of this number, 731 were revocations and 229 were suspensions. A total of 567 drivers were deprived of their driving rights because of drunken driving, bringing total drunken driving convictions for the year to 1,197. The February toll, however, was 70 under that for the same month last year, when 637 motorists lost their licenses for drunken driving.

State Has Outbreak Of Measles; Symptoms Given

By WILLIAM H. RICHARDSON (North Carolina State Board of Health)

RALEIGH — An epidemic of measles is underway in North Carolina, according to Doctor Charles P. Stevick, Director of the State Board of Health's Division of Epidemiology. While there were only 1,353 cases reported for the entire year of 1948, there were 2,399 cases reported during January and February of this year. The 1947 total was 5,000 cases.

According to Doctor Stevick, measles is one of the few remaining diseases that occur from time to time in epidemic form. "While poliomyelitis occurs in epidemics at intervals that are totally unpredictable," he said, "measles usually can be expected to appear in North Carolina in epidemic form about every other year. The largest number of cases reported in the last ten years occurred in 1938, when there were 50,000 cases. In that year, there were 251 deaths."

The epidemiologist pointed out that, due to the fact that only 1,353 cases occurred in 1948, the present year can be expected to have a high measles incidence. "This expectation," he pointed out, "has proven correct by case reports received by the State Board of Health so far this year. "Epidemics," he went on, "usually start in December and reach their peak in March, April and May. In January, 1949, there were 802 cases reported, and in February, 1,597."

Quoting from a leaflet issued by the State Board of Health, entitled, "Facts About Measles," which is available to the public upon application, Doctor Stevick gave the following information about measles, in view of the fact that an epidemic appears under way: "Measles or Roseola is one of the most common of the communicable diseases. The name is frequently confused with German Measles or Rubella, which is an entirely different and less severe disease, although it does produce certain similar symptoms.

"Measles is so highly contagious that practically no one escapes having it sooner or later. Most of the cases occur before the age of ten years. The mortality rate is low, except in extremely young children; however, serious complications can occur at any age. Most measles deaths are caused by pneumonia. Other complications are bronchitis and ear infections.

Symptoms of Measles

"The symptoms of this disease resemble those of a cold the first few days, gradually increasing in severity with an irregular, steadily rising fever. On about the fourth day, the skin eruption appears. It occurs first on the face and neck and during the next 24 to 48 hours spreads to the chest and extremities. The fever usually falls after the rash has stopped spreading, although the cough, watery eyes, and nasal discharge last several more days.

"The rash consists of spots that are raised only slightly above the surface of the skin. The spots are pinhead size when they first appear and soon grow larger so that many of them run together to form irregular blotches. The color is pink the first day or two, and they slowly turn red, then brown. About one week after the rash appears, the skin may begin to peel in fine-bran-like flakes.

"A person who is infected with measles can spread the disease to others for 24 to 48 hours before the symptoms appear. Since these first symptoms are not much different from those of a cold, it often happens that such a person spreads the disease to many other individuals before he is isolated.
