Hilliard D. Moody Building House For 40,000 Chicks

That five-story barn with the round roof on the Dellwood Road will be a home for 40,000 prospective broilers when it is finished some time late this spring. And it will be something of a high spot in the 20 years Hilliard D. Moody has been in the poultry business.

"I started off 20 years ago with just 500 chickens in that house down there," he said pointing out the second floor window to a weather-worn little shack in the yard. "I didn't know much about chickens then. A man who starts off with a lot of chickens will go broke."

There'll be room for 10,000 chickens on each of the 90 by 54 foot concrete floors when the work is done, and they'll go in on a staggered schedule. About two or three weeks after the 10,000 go in on the first floor, the second floor will be filled. Then about three weeks later, he'll put 10,000 broilers on the third floor, and, after the same interval of time, he'll fill the fourth floor.

By that time, the chickens on the first floor will be ready for the market, and the rotation of filling the vacancies in the house will start over again.

"This place is going to cost me a lot more than I figured it would. Got 30,000 feet of lumber alone in the new part."

But if the prices are right and his luck holds up, Mr. Moody figures the building will pay for itself in about a year.

"I'll sell an average of five thousand and chickens a month after the house gets running," he estimated. "The first two floors are enclosed by stone."

"That was built back in WPA days, when you could get a mason for three dollars a day, and common labor for a dollar," he said.

The work on the addition and the remodeling started the first of the year.

"First I was going to lay cement on this second floor, tear off the roof, and then make a third floor. But after we got started, I just decided we ought to go ahead and make it five stories."

Mr. Moody is doing his own carpentry to help save on the costs, and he's supplying his own pipe. There will be 590 feet of pipe in the four rooms to provide the hot water heat for the chickens.

Helping him now is Ben Fisher, who lives on the farm, and Charles Hanes, brother-in-law to one of Mr. Moody's daughters.

Since he started the work in January, Mr. Moody had five men, including himself, on the job at one time, but after the roof was put on, he let two of them off.

Getting the roof on was slow work, because of the spells of cold weather.

But the work went on pretty steady after the top was finished. In raising his broilers before, Mr. Moody would change them to another floor of the old house after they were four weeks old.

"But when you change them like that, everything is strange to them. They don't know where to roost for one thing. I'm going to keep the chickens on one floor all the time till they are ready to be sold."

The 40,000 chickens will be the most Mr. Moody has ever handled. He ran the flock of 500 he started with up to 20,000 about five years ago.

By then he had a lot of experience with chickens.

"But it's pretty much of a gamble," Mr. Moody said.

He went broke. "Got some bad chickens, lost $8,000 that year, and went broke."

But—"I started off again, and last summer I had 10,000 chickens."

That barn is beginning to shape up as something more than a residence for 40,000 birds.

It will be a monument to a man's faith.

Bill To Change Term Of Clyde Officials Nears Ratification

A bill which would cut the terms of Clyde government officials in half is up for ratification into law in the state legislature.

Representative Grover Davis' measure, which would set the terms of mayor, aldermen, and police court judge at two years, passed second and third readings in the Senate last Saturday.

If the bill is enacted, current terms of these officials would expire June 7, when an election would be held.

The Haywood representative's bill was introduced March 28, got a favorable report the next day from the House Committee on Counties, Cities and Towns.

Two days after it was introduced, the measure was given second and third readings in the House and sent to the Senate, which sent it to committee.

The senate passed it on second and third readings after the bill was reported favorably by the senate committee.

Appalachian Band To Give 2 Concerts In Haywood Soon

Appalachian State Teachers' College's 46-piece band will give two of its nine concerts in Haywood County during a seven-day tour of North Carolina and Tennessee next week.

The band will appear at Canton April 14 for a concert at 10 a.m., then will give its second Haywood concert at eight o'clock that night at the Waynesville High School.

The featured soloists are Helen Winkler, marimba player, and William Robinson, bass.

Typhoid Clinics Are Set Up For This County

Dr. Mary Michal, district health officer, announced today that the 1949 typhoid clinics will be held soon in schools throughout the county.

These clinics, which are open to adults, are for the administration of "booster" typhoid shots, which should be taken once a year, she added.

Dr. Michal explained that these booster shots are more effective and simpler than the alternative of taking a series of three doses every three years.

Such inoculations are necessary in addition to the initial vaccinations because, she explained, the protection after the vaccination does not last long.

"The clinics are held in the schools each year," she explained, "since it is difficult to get everyone together at clinics held in a community in the summer — and everyone, young and old, needs this protection if we are to continue to be free of typhoid fever in our communities."

The health officer advised that, besides the annual clinics at the schools, the regular immunization clinics are held every Friday from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. at the District Health office in Waynesville, and every Saturday from 9 a.m. to 12 noon at the Health Department office in Canton.

Typhoid fever, Dr. Michal warned, "is a serious, infectious disease caused by the typhoid bacillus."

The germs, she explained, are present in the intestines and urinary tract of an infected person or of a carrier. They are spread chiefly through drinking water polluted with infected bodily waste matter.

For example, she said, "water may be infected with typhoid fever germs if a water supply is polluted with drainage from poorly built or improperly located privy vaults" in districts that have no sewers.

In regard to the school clinics, Dr. Michal said persons who do not want their children to take the vaccine when the clinic is held should send a note by the child to his teacher so that the Health Department may have the information. "Otherwise," the health officer said, "we understand that you want your child given the dose."
