

Concert Tonight At WTHS By Lyric Soprano

One of America's rising young singing stars will give a concert at eight o'clock tonight at the Waynesville High School Auditorium.

She is Carolyn Long, a lyric soprano, who is appearing in the third and final concert of the Community Concert Association.

With Kenneth Zimmerman accompanying her on the piano, she will open with Purcell's "Nymphs and Shepherds," then follow with "Come Again, Sweet Love" by Dowland.

Rounding out the first part of her program, Mrs. Long will sing "His' His' My Mother Calls" from Samuel Arnold's opera, "The Maid of the Mill," and "A Vistula" by O'Connor-Morris.

She will then sing Verdi's immortal opera "Aida" for the second portion of the program, singing the aria, "Ritorna in patria."

Before intermission, her selections will be "The Statue at Czarskoe-Selo," "The Crook" by Sachnowsky, "The Slough," "Kolanz," and the aria "Pace pace mio Dio" from Verdi's "La Forza del Destino."

Mr. Zimmerman's piano offerings, Smetana's "Polka" and "Poulenec-Toccata" will be presented after intermission.

Miss Long will follow with "Absence from the North Pole" by Berlin, "Sally" by Faure, "C'est le jour printemps" and "Les gars qui vont a la fête" by Paulsen, "Serenade" by John Alden Carpenter, and "I I Could Have My Wish" by Margaret Cavendish.

The concert will close the concert with the Negro spirituals, "Steal Away" and "Roll Jordan Roll."

The talented singer who started her music career at the age of five when she started playing the piano, was discovered by Columbia Artists Management and presented.

By chance, the management heard some of her audition record. A long-term contract for the young star was the result.

She made her debut in the summer of 1936 as a guest star on the "Harvey" of State program. From October to December, she toured a vocal tour with the Strauss Festival.

Her recent engagements include performances at the San Antonio Opera Festival and summer concerts with the Baltimore Symphonies.

The young Maryland native also appeared with Hans Schweiger and the Fort Wayne orchestra in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Admission to the concert will be by membership in the Concert Series or by single tickets which will be available at the door. Season tickets for next year's concert series will also be on sale at the door.

Reuben and senator Clyde Hoey are doing the further development of the Park and Parkway. He also pointed out that work on the Blue Ridge Parkway would be a great asset to the Highlands-Maggie area.

Mrs. Edith E. Allen, secretary to the N. C. Park Commission, told the committee that the map of Western North Carolina on the atlas is an important point of entrance to the Park and its development will be made at the state and federal level.

James K. Ratcliff, president of the Chamber of Commerce, pledged cooperation of the organization, and also pledged the abilities of the development program in this area.

There were a large number of people from Waynesville and Cherokee at the meeting.

Jack Wether and John Finger led the opposition to changing the name of the park to the Highlands-Maggie area.

Jim Platt, Sr., is president of the Boy Scouts Club and Bill Milner is secretary. The special committee named to select four tentative community names and present them on petitions to citizens for a decision, includes Mr. Platt, Mr. Milner, John C. Frazier, A. R. Phillips, N. W. Rogers and Mr. Edwards.

MORE ABOUT Players

The crowd was kept in a continuous uproar throughout the game.

The unexpected was always happening. The expert riders did not ride, and those inexperienced in donkey ways, got along fairly well at times.

One player who managed to get to first base, made a sincere plea with the umpire to call him out—"I'd never live to get all around the bases on this thing." The umpire obliged.

It would be hard to pick the climax of the evening—just as it would be to pick the player that hit the ground the hardest. Friday morning all players claimed the title, as they walked with a careful step, mindful of every movement that called upon back and his muscles.

Joe Liner assumed the role of a clown, and constantly paraded the field, and wherever he found a contented donkey, he gave it a sharp stab with his umbrella, and that started action. Many a player unaware of what was going on behind his back, soon found himself flat on the field, with the donkey elsewhere, all because of a sudden stab by Joe.

One player, limping off the field, covered with dust and grime, remarked: "Now I know what an atomic bomb is made of—a ground up donkey." And he looked the part, as he rubbed a hand which had been stepped on by his burro.

As to the score, that apparently was a secret—some figured 4 to 3 in favor of the Lions. The actual results will not be known until the cost of linament, and plasters have been paid for.

The band is actually the winner by some $300 or more.

Miller Ingram, photographer, had a field day. He made about 25 pictures of the flying players. He stayed in one spot, and the balking, rip-roaring donkeys usually unloaded their player right in front of the camera.

It was good entertainment, and the spectators fell for the antics of the players, as hard as the players hit the dirt, and that was some hitting.

MORE ABOUT Thickety

Wayne Corpening and Assistant County Agent Herb Singletary arrived at the meeting to help with the further organization of the community program.

In answer to a question, Mr. Corpening suggested that the health office be contacted about the matter.

Members of the audience pointed out that the dump constituted a hazard to health as well as a nuisance, especially during the summer months.

They pointed out that it was a breeding ground for flies, and that winds frequently littered the community with trash blown from the dump.

Turning to the administrative organization of the community development program, Chairman K. O. Carswell appointed a nominating committee of Sam Robinson, chairman, James Smith, Mrs. George Wright, and Mrs. Ernest Jones.

This committee will set up the special committees for the promotion of the program.

The next session was scheduled for 7:30 p. m. Thursday at the Oak Grove Church.

John Gray, in charge of extension forestry at North Carolina State College, told the audience that timberland on the farm should be considered as crops, and should be given the same attention as crops. He discussed the care of woodlands on small farms.

In connection with his discussion, a movie on forestry was shown.
