Leather For Town

Brown suede suit.

By VERA WINSTON

COUNTRY FOLKS KNOW that there is nothing like leather and now those beautiful coats and suits even dresses of suede, so beloved by sportswomen everywhere, have taken on town airs. Very dashing is this costume in slinky suede, so treated that it is as pliable as fabric. The snug bodice flares from the waist to a back-dipping tunic, and encrusted bands of suede, darker than the caramel brown of the suit, buckle at the chest. The skirt is straight and slim with a flared, slit flange at the hem.
