

Wounded Vets Work To Aid Crippled

CHICAGO (UP)—A group of disabled veterans here, understanding what it's like to be handicapped, are busy fashioning artificial limbs for persons crippled at birth or by disease.

They study under the GI bill of rights in the city's only school of its kind, the Chicago School of Plastic Surgical Prosthetics, incorporated not-for-profit several years ago.

The veterans learn how to mold sculpturing, modeling and casting to make replacements for facial and body parts. They make life-like noses, eyes, ears, breasts, cheeks, mouths, hair scalps, hands or portions of a hand, and metal skull plates which brain surgeons use for persons with skull defects.

The hands are soft, skin-like, with cuticle, fingernails and imbedded hairs. Ears can be bent forward and released to spring back into place. They have moulded elastic calves to restore contours to legs of polio victims.

Many Charity Patients

Fourteen veterans turn out as many as 100 facial and limb replacements a day. They serve many charity patients because they feel their products should be within reach of anybody.

When a patient comes in, photographs and color charts are made and a synthetic material chosen to match his skin. Once the original mould is made, replacements are easy to make, the veterans say. The average one lasts 10 or 12 months.

The biggest headache, according to the school's director, is summer's tan. If a farmer gets a nose or cheek replacement, it will not tan like the rest of his face. So, some order a winter nose and a summer nose.

Unfortunately, nothing has yet been devised to make prosthetic ears turn red in winter, as a normal ear does, the official said. However, researchers are reporting on new lacquers, tints and dyes which might prove superior to those now used.

Rubber Latex Used

Industry also advises the school of its newest findings in the fields of synthetic resins and other artificial materials. Rubber latex is the basic substance now used.

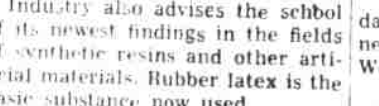

So far, no work has been done at the school in making toes and feet because "these don't usually show." Students are primarily interested in "cosmetic effects."

Ears and hands are among the most difficult portions of the body to make because they must match their opposite partner, the students say. An ear usually takes a week to make, a hand several weeks. A nose takes two or three days and more imagination and creative effort may be put into fashioning it, they believe.

Prosthetic work supplements plastic surgery work. Sometimes because of a co-existing disease or age, doctors prefer replacing missing parts than reconstructing them with living tissue.

Freehold Raceway, harness racing track at Freehold, N. J., will operate from Aug. 11 to Sept. 10 this season.

Thumb-Sucking No Cause For Alarm

OTTAWA, Ont. (UP)—Dr. W. E. Blatz, child specialist, took hefty swipes at psychoanalysts over the problem of child thumb-sucking.

"No lasting harm follows it," he said, "and it doesn't have the sinister meanings that psychoanalysts would ascribe to it."

He said children often were driven to sucking their thumbs because of boredom.

"It is also a perpetuation of sucking," he added, "and another reason for it is when children are afraid, they want that thumb."

New Era Recognized

SANTA FE, N. M. (UP)—The New Mexico legislature has taken note of the atomic age. The governor signed a bill extending workmen's compensation benefits to include "occupational illnesses" which can be traced to working with "fissionable materials."

Dayton Officials Are Attending Safety School

Twenty-four members of the Dayton Rubber Company management are going to school to learn how to make the home and the job safer.

The students are foremen, supervisors, or department heads at the Hazelwood plant.

They are attending a week-long course in industrial safety being taught two hours a day by Mark McKenzie of the N. C. Industrial Commission in Raleigh.

Ned Tucker of Dayton, made arrangements for the school which is being held through tomorrow at the club room of Patrick's Restaurant from 3:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Though the Dayton plant at Hazelwood was given a citation for improvement of safety conditions, company officials requested the course held in an effort to cut
