Jesus Institutes the Lord's Supper

DISCIPLES EAT PASSOVER WITH HIM IN UPPER ROOM

Scripture Mark 14:12-26; Luke 22:7-38.
By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
 THROUGHOUT the ages people have celebrated important dates with feasts with their families, with neighbors and friends. Our Bible records many such feasts.
 In troublous times, such as these, meetings of congenial people either in private homes or in public eating places, helps to cheer us and keep our minds clear from dwelling too much on disagreeable future possibilities.
 The Passover—the time when, before the exodus from Egypt, the angel of death passed over the homes of Israel's people to slay the Egyptian firstborn and so persuade Pharaoh to let the Israelites go—had been celebrated with dear ones for centuries.
 It was natural, then, that Jesus, who knew His death was near, should desire to observe it with those nearest and dearest to Him—His disciples.
 His disciples asked Jesus where He wanted to eat the passover, and He answered that two of them should go into the city—Jerusalem—and there they would see a man bearing a water pitcher on his head. They were to follow him, and where he entered they should tell the master of the house to prepare his upper room for them. There they would eat their passover feast.

 The two disciples did as the Master had told them and in this "large upper room, furnished and ready," the passover was prepared. This was on Thursday evening.
 "And as they were eating, He took bread, and when He had blessed, He brake it, and gave to them, and said, Take ye; this is My body. . . . And He took a cup, and when He had given thanks, He gave to them; and they all drank of it. And He said unto them, This is My blood of the covenant, which is poured out for many. . . . Verily I say unto you, I shall no more drink of the fruit of the vine, until that day when I drink it new in the Kingdom of God."
 An account of the regular program of observance of the passover would be interesting to the children, but there is not room for it in this brief summary of the event.
 Jesus said to them then, that

MEMORY VERSE
 "This do in remembrance of Me."—1 Cor. 11:25.

ter than they knew themselves. Peter was doubtless sincere when he swore to Jesus that he would go with Him into a prison, or even suffer death with Him, but he did not know his own weakness. He did not know the panic of fear that would overwhelm him when he was in danger and would cause him to deny that he knew His Master in the hour of peril.
 He probably could not know—as Jesus did—how near the tragic moment was when he would see his friend tried before prejudiced churchmen who were determined this menace to their religious views and their positions of authority in the temple was to be removed from the world.
 Jesus knew full well what was in store for Him. He knew His enemies well enough to realize that they would leave no stone unturned to do Him to death. He knew too, that the crowds that had gathered around Him when He taught them, or healed their sick, were fickle, and would turn on Him if swayed by the influential men of the community.

Kraft Foods Company Chairman Says Attend Sunday School

The nation's Sunday Schools, says Board Chairman James L. Kraft of Kraft Foods Company, are vital for transforming the energies of youth into the power of spiritual adulthood.
 In advising regular attendance at Sunday School, Mr. Kraft makes this statement:
 "Almost everyone who has occasion to meet and work with young people—as I have had the privilege of doing for a good many decades—is struck by one eternal quality recurring in the youth of every generation. That quality is eagerness, eagerness to do, eagerness to achieve, eagerness to learn. It is a veritable Niagara Falls of energy and potential power.
 The boys and girls of today have this wonderful quality. This new hope for the world. Within themselves, they have the potential power to rebuild the world nearer to heart's desire. If they will it so, they can make this a productive and peaceful world. But young people can utilize their tremendous energies to produce good in the world only if they are able to harness them and put them to work efficiently and intelligently. Helping to turn these mighty energies into the true power of spiritual adulthood is the work—the sole work—of the Sunday schools of our churches. Nowhere else are the training and spiritual education and lessons in self-discipline and self-realization available to our young people. The work of our Sunday schools therefore becomes a primary consideration at every responsible adult in this nation.
 Our public schools do an important job of helping to train young minds. There are countless civic programs which help to train young bodies and coordinate young muscles and teach some of the lessons of good sportsmanship. These have the deserved support of most of our citizenry. Yet without spiritual education, a sound background of moral and religious training, all other courses of training fail.
 In this most important of all the responsibilities of education—that of training the mind and spirit—countless millions of adults are woefully neglectful or indifferent or both. To provide for the schooling of a child's mind, to provide for his physical health, yet to neglect the health and growth of the soul within him is to rob him of his birthright—and cripple his spirit.
 Until every boy and girl, and every man and woman in this nation has become an active participant in a Sunday school and church program, we are neglecting our most important national resource—the spiritual power of our people. It is not enough merely to send your children to Sunday school.
