These results came from the eight-stanchion model barn he built with his own hands in less than four months. Last Friday, he finished work on his new spur road to the milking barn, and he's planning to remodel the old building near it into a housing barn. He also recently completed a well at his house at a cost of $650. Elsewhere in the community, the residents have finished the new parking lot at the church, and plans are to level and plant grass in the cemetery. The Thickety Cemetery, oldest in the community, is being cared for with funds donated by the citizens, who plan to clean and decorate it in June and September every year. Mr. Carswell reports that so far, the farmers have sowed a total of 15 acres of their land in ladino and orchard grass for improved pasture. S. D. McCrary bought a new ... and crafts, and any other activity that provides amusement and education for both young and old. In Clime, discussing the need for facilities pointed out that Cecil had been from Wayneville and Carolina that there is little the residents can do on Sunday for amusement at other church hours. Everyone who attended the meeting signed a petition drawn by the community roads committee calling for the asphalt paving of the 12 miles of road entering the community. The petition, which now bears approximately 100 names, will be filed with the Haywood board of commissioners at its meeting July 13 with the district highway engineer. Dr. Clime later pointed out that Cecil is the only large township in the county that does not have a inch-foot of paved road. The campaign aims at the paving of the thoroughfare from Bethel through the township, including the branches below Lake Logan Dam to Spruce and from the Little East Fork to the Boy Scout camp. Other major community projects, he continued, are to improve the school and the school grounds, and to increase telephone facilities. At present only 8 or 10 homes in the community have telephones. "We need 25 or 30 more," he said. In other business, the residents at the community Independence Day picnic for 2 p. m. July 3 at Bethel Gap on the Blue Ridge Parkway.

In charge of arrangements are Mrs. Harry Rogers, chairman of the executive committee, and Mrs. Thomas Erwin, program committee chairman. Transportation will be furnished for the event. Clerken or spokesmen for each of the community committees reported encouraging progress in every phase of activity under the program and that interest continued to build. Dr. Clime supported this testimony by pointing out that an average of 100 persons have attended the regular meetings since the community was organized. The only exception was the May day night meeting attendance was kept below average because of the flood damage to East Fork bridge. No one on the other side of the river could get to the school on the session. Harry Rogers opened the meeting with a devotional service, including a prayer, Scripture reading, and the singing of hymns. The residents voted to hold their regular meetings at 7:30 P. M. every fourth Thursday hereafter.

are only "a half a dozen counties" that are adequately staffed in welfare work. She advised the board members that only on the basis of their knowledge of their own needs would they be able to request additional staff workers. Dr. Winston also explained that under the state merit system for state employees, the regulations of low flexibility in salary compensation, and that it is up to the county welfare board members to see that their workers get salary increases where they are merited. She also stressed the importance of further training for county welfare workers and suggested to the officials that they not only see that their staff of workers go to these training schools, but encourage them to go there. This periodic additional training, she said, would make for improvement of the quality of staff workers, and additional funds have been provided for these special schools. She touched also on every other phase of welfare work, from sound practices in holding board meetings and getting attractive offices with adequate space to the subject of county homes and licensed boarding homes. R. Eugene Brown, state director of public assistance, and Mrs. W. B. Aycock, director of personnel for the state department, addressed the meeting in the afternoon. During the luncheon recess, Mrs. Sam Queen, Haywood county welfare superintendent, was hostess to the state and county officials and field representatives at her Queen's Fourth Farm near Waynesville. The counties represented at the all-day meeting included, in addition to Haywood, Cherokee, Macon, McDowell, Graham, Swain, Jackson, Madison, Clay, Transylvania, Henderson, Rutherford, Polk, Yancey, Buncombe and Mitchell. Day tile walls and floors, considered standard for 20th century bathroom, were used in Room's public baths during the reign of the Caesars.

John Nesbitt in charge assisted by Mrs. R. Siler, processed 16,299 cans. Meanwhile, Mrs. Siler reported a new cannery is being built at Fines Creek. The new machines for making apple sauce and tomato juice provided a blessing, particularly in the case of the apple sauce, as it eliminated the old, long, tedious process of straining at home. The machines permit the canner to process an entire bushel of apples in a few minutes. Mrs. Siler also announced that Mrs. J. C. Pennel, specialist of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, will be in Haywood County July 7 to give a demonstration at the Waynesville cannery at 9 A. M. All who expect to use the cannery this year will find the workshop to be held on that day valuable. Mrs. Siler urged anyone who will have food ready for canning on the day of the demonstration to notify her. Mrs. Siler said all the canneries are anticipating a year of record activity. Spacing is important in producing maximum yields of sweet potatoes, says H. M. Covington, horticulture specialist for the State College Extension Service.

R. P. Butler, Rockingham County farmer, is using dextring as a source of supplemental income along with his tobacco production. He has an eight cow dairy herd and 6 1/2 acres of tobacco.
