

Rambling 'Round

afternoon she takes all of the side streets in their stride. She has managed to find many things of interest that have escaped the eyes of a lot of us.

It is SO easy to tell the other fellow not to worry . . . then why don't we listen to the other fellow when he tells US?

Nothing in this world seems farther away than the inside of your house or room when you have lost or mislaid the key that will open that door.

Half of LIFE is an if.

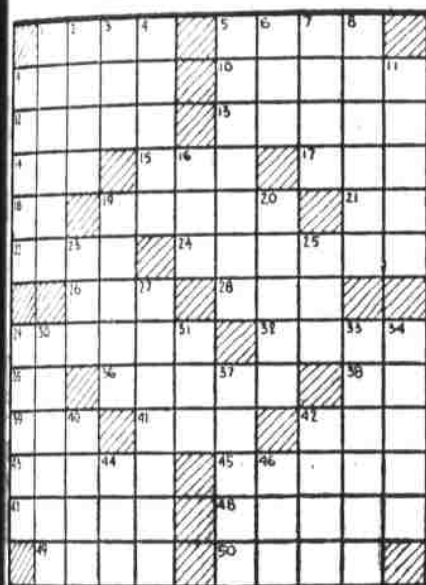

with it, under the conditions under which it was sold, those counties which have voted out brew are now creating the need of raising taxes in order to meet declining revenues.

They forces can be as misleading sometimes as any other group, and frequently in their eagerness to get rid of beer they minimize the tax in revenue which kicking it out entails. They have enough argument against it without pursuing this course.

Four counties in North Carolina and there are likely others . . . are now in the process of biking their rates because of loss of beer licenses.
