Minister Says Man Must Guide Animal Instincts

Man's natural impulses, or animal instincts, can be put to worthwhile uses, they should not be allowed to run wild or to be subdued, according to the Rev. Dr. Wallace Hamilton, St. Petersburg, Florida minister who is filling a series of pulp engagements at the Lake Junaluska Assembly.

Drawing lessons from the gospel of Jesus—"behold we put bits in the horses mouths that they may obey us," Dr. Hamilton had for his subject, "Riding Wild Horses." He compared the inherent impulses in man to animal traits and said untamed impulses are like wild horses.

"We are born," said the speaker, "with a powerful set of impulses which we share with all animal creation. In them lies the great driving force of life. The great business of life is learning what to do with the wild horses of human instinct. There are three answers to this question that have been tried throughout human history.

"The first way is that of self-assertion. Subscribers to this view say let the wild horses run; give full release to animal instinct; it is wrong to inhibit or suppress a natural desire.

"The second answer is the extreme opposite—self negation. Those who accept this theory say these primitive desires are so fierce that we must find a way to reduce them or stamp them out. The horses are so wild we must tame them.

"But the answer of Jesus is that these strong passions in our human nature must not be allowed to run wild or to be subdued or destroyed. They must be put to use, pulled together in a greater passion and consecrated to the Kingdom of God. Harness the horse and ride him.

Modern psychology seems just beginning to discover Him at this point in learning how to integrate the warring desires of our hearts which, though back of all our sins, are the great driving force of life. The world seems always to alternate between two extremes—on the one hand a Nietzsche in self-assertion, which, giving free rein to instinct, leaves man an untamed, though sometimes an educated, savage; on the other hand a sort of Buddhism which, breaking the spirit of man, taking the fight out of him, leaves him a dried-up cabbage. But the wholeness of Jesus is the miracle of history. He does not distrust our human nature or fear its fiery passions. He says I am come not to destroy life, but to fulfill, to make it more abundant. Jesus is not at war with our human nature."

NEW FORMALITY FOR LINEN

IRISH LINEN GETS FRENCH ACCENT. . . Summer collections of a number of noted designers feature Irish linen ensembles which depart from the usual casual use of the fabric. Left is Christian Dior's natural linen afternoon dress with trimming of turquoise wool embroidery and fringe on its cape collar. Right is Janet Walker's dress-up frock in cocoa linen with black braid embroidery on its large pannier pockets. Other styles have velvet or fringe trim.

Dr. Wilder Speaks At Lake Junaluska

The Rev. Dr. James Wilder, pastor of First Methodist church in Gatlinburg, Tennessee, stirred a large congregation when he preached Wednesday night under the auspices of the Lake Junaluska Assembly.

Speaking on the "Call of Christ," Dr. Wilder raised three questions, namely: How Deeply do I care; How much of Christ do I have to share; and How far will I go? How we answer God's call, he said is another thing, but answering it is another, and how we answer it depends upon how we answer the three questions.

"The call of Christ," said the speaker, is especially relevant to our day, for God's call has always been more clearly heard in times of danger rather than in times of ease and comfort. There is something about trouble that destroys man's humanistic self confidence and throws him back upon God. In days such as these we can hear God more clearly than ever before.

"I come to you with no easy panacea for the ills of the world. There is only one way out. We Christians have that way and we must share it with the world. How deeply do we care? Our world is shattered and confused. Men are pain-ridden and lost. How deeply do we care?

"Christianity taught us to care, and that is a great thing. Concern for the lost must fill the prayers of Christians because they are the concerns of God of Christ—and of the great Christian saints of the past. How much of Christ do we have to share? How far will we dare? The Master is come and calleth for thee. Will they be able to say of you and of me, 'He went.'"

Wagner Resigns Senate Post

New York's 72-year-old U. S. Senator, Robert F. Wagner, resigned this week because of his health. He was noted for his sponsorship of social and labor legislation, which included the Wagner Labor Relations Act, bills on NRA, social security, the U. S. Housing Act, anti-lynching bills, and the Taft-Hartley-Wagner housing bill.

The veteran Democrat had served more than 22 years in the Senate.

New Car Sales Increasing In North Carolina

Nearly twice as many new cars were brought into North Carolina during May as in the same month last year but the number of trucks sold was on the decline, the North Carolina Department of Motor Vehicles reported today.

During May, 7,483 new cars were sold in North Carolina as compared with 4,659 last year. Trucks sold numbered 1,817, a drop from the 2,455 sold in the same month last year. The May sales brought to 31,964 the number of new cars sold this year and 9,412 the number of trucks.

Chevrolet led car sales with 1,905. Ford was second with 1,354. In truck sales Chevrolet outstripped other vehicles with 704 sales. Ford sold 461 and Dodge, 215.

14 Per Cent Flunk State Driving Tests

Fourteen per cent of the persons seeking license to drive during May failed to make the grade, according to a report of driver's license examiners released today by the North Carolina Department of Motor Vehicles.

A total of 36,493 applications were approved and 5,601 were disapproved. Learners' permits issued numbered 11,433; 27,978 road tests were given; 29,765 operators' licenses, 2,564 duplicate licenses and 4,144 chauffeurs' licenses were issued. Revenue from this source amounted to $69,140.

Causes of failure to obtain licenses among persons who previously held them were: Signs, 419; eyes, 252; rules, 390; road test, 263; equipment, 31; among new applicants: $935; 379; eyes, 107; rules, 308; road test, 471; equipment, 26.
