May Saddest Month For Game Law Violators

Prosecutions of individuals breaking fish and game laws and regulations during the month of May exceeded any single month in the history of fish and game law enforcement in North Carolina, with a total of 750 court cases, according to Clyde P. Patton, Executive Director of the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission.

In discussing the record-breaking prosecution list, Patton pointed out that the increase over previous months was the result of increased activity and efficiency of the game and fish law enforcement staff, plus a greater number of sportsmen engaging in fishing than ever before in the history of the State. The Commission's radio-equipped patrol plane and wildlife patrol were instrumental in making many of the arrests, and the law enforcement staff has reached a full complement of fish and game protectors.

Most of the prosecutions resulted from persons fishing without proper licenses. The law enforcement staff has been directed to crack down on this type of violation as well as all other types of fish and game law infractions.

The game of auction bridge originated in India.

After fielding an up-hill battle all the way, the Beacon Mills nine rapped out six hits, good for five runs in the top of the eighth inning to hand Hazelwood a seven-to-five defeat. Wednesday afternoon of the Waynesville High diamond. The game was a re-scheduled tilt from last Saturday.

The local nine established a three run lead in the third inning when Ammons was safe on an error. Bishop doubled. Troutman singled. Pitt was safe on a fielder's choice and Manager Dudley led out two base blow.

Beacon scored once in the fourth and fifth and then rallied for five runs in the eighth to crush the war.

Hazelwood added single runs in the fourth and fifth to equalize their account for the game.

O. Walldrop, Burkner and Burges, each named out three for five to pace the winners, while Lamm, Bishop and Oliver Young had three for five, including two doubles, to lead the losers.
