Ratliff Cove C. D. Meeting Thursday

By MRS. ALGIE RATLIFF, Mountaineer Correspondent

Residents of Ratliff Cove will open their regular Community Development meeting at 8 p. m. Thursday at the Ratliff Cove Baptist Church with Community Chairman R. C. Francis presiding.

Among the important business which will come up will be the discussion of plans for remodeling the church building for use as a community center.

Yesterday, the church congregation voted approval of the proposal to loan the building to the community after the church deacons had previously given their blessing to the idea along with the pastor, the Rev. B. N. Rogers.

The brick building once served as a school house, and also as a community center before the church obtained it.

AP Newsfeatures

Four years ago, August 14, Japan called quits in the war. She still had 2,000,000 men under arms in her home islands. She had another million in China and perhaps 700,000 more in other parts of the empire she had carved for herself in the Pacific.

"The enemy has begun to employ a new and most cruel bomb. This is the reason we have ordered the acceptance of the joint declaration of the powers," said Emperor Hirohito. But there was much in addition to the A-bomb.

Long before the first A-bomb was dropped on Hiroshima, Aug. 6, 1945, other types of bombs had been devastating Japan. Her war industries were at low ebb. She could not repair, much less rebuild her shattered fleet.

Giant U. S. fleets roamed the Pacific at will, hammering at Japan with bombs and shells. British ships also were in action. Germany and her other Axis allies had been defeated.

Aug. 7, 1942, U. S. Marines first landed on Guadalcanal. Since that time, U. S. forces had advanced step by step across the vast reaches of the Pacific. Now they were on Okinawa, 325 miles from the Japanese homeland.

Russia had declared war Aug. 8 and her troops were sweeping down through Manchuria.

Japan's vital supply lines had long been cut. Submarines, airplanes, surface ships were hunting down the last of the ships needed to bring in supplies.

What did Japan have besides 3,700,000 troops? Her navy could put to sea only two light carriers, two cruisers, 26 destroyers and 22 submarines. Except for the Kamikaze (suicide) corps, her airforce was virtually out of action. Radar, proximity fuses which exploded shells when they approached a plane and fighter opposition were getting 98 out of 100 suicide planes. Although the two out of 100 that got through did damage, they did not stop the vast Allied fleets.

Equipment for Japan's still large armies was in almost as sad a state as her fleet and her airforce. Replacement was impossible.

Japan no longer had the means to fight a major war when the second A-bomb fell on Nagasaki Aug. 9.
