Cool Cotton Lingerie

White batiste slip with eyelet embroidery.

By VERA WINSTON

COOL COTTON Lingerie is a summer boon for which we are duly grateful. Here is a dainty slip in fine white batiste, the aristocrat of cotton weaves. It is made with a two-way top to meet competition from its rayon, silk and nylon counterparts. It can be worn with button-on straps, the buttons concealed beneath the lace, or it may be strapless. Bands of eyelet embroidery with lace insets trim the top and hem. Baby ribbon drawn through the top is tied twice to make it more secure when worn without straps.

Miss Dearborn Is Engaged To Ens. R. L. Lee

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Mary Ann Dearborn, daughter of Mrs. Jean A. Dearborn, of San Diego, California, to Ensign Robert L. Lee, Jr., U.S.N., son of R. L. Lee and the late Mrs. Nell Dyer Lee of Waynesville. The wedding will take place in San Diego on August 28.

The bride-elect is a graduate of San Luis Rey Academy.

Ensign Lee is a 1948 graduate of the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, and for the past several months has been stationed in California. He graduated at the Waynesville High School before entering Annapolis.

Button up your silhouette. This seems to be the theme song of fall fashions, as suits, coats and dresses break out in a rash of buttons.

The slim suit silhouette especially lends itself to button trimming, with skirts slit and buttoned at front side or back. Some of the new suit skirts button all the way up the front, others have side buttons from waist to hem.

There is some variety in jackets, the most popular style, however, being medium length, sleek and fitted with velvet collar and sometimes cuffs.

Fabrics are more important than ever in the fall suit picture, with many handsome new light-weight weaves in unusual colors and patterns.

The taupe tones are tops, ranging from deep slate gray to light coffee brown. These rich neutrals may be worn with practically any color accessories, and are destined for long and useful lives for that reason.

Shoulders are lightly padded as a rule, achieving a rounded, natural line. Waistlines are slim but not excessively nipped-in, and the silhouette as a whole is slim and natural.

You'll be seeing small checks, stripes and shadow plaids in tweeds that have distinct texture interest.

The over-all effect usually is neutral but often is achieved by a subtle blending of colors.

In the dressier category there are new chiffon-weight broadcloths that look almost like satin, used for after-five suits of great elegance. A deep navy blue threatens the supremacy of black in this field, and braid and button trimmings again are in high favor. Skirts are mid-calf length — no longer.

It looks like a happy suit season for Mrs. U.S.A., with a silhouette that is casual, simple and easy to wear.
