scribed it to them. "It is just beyond words," Mrs. Booth said. "We are so happy that our 4-H club boys and girls are coming here next summer - see I am all enthused much more - the reception given us today has been wonderful, the people so friendly - well, I guess I can wait until I get back next year. This is really a wonderful country," she continued, taking deep breaths of the mountain air.

The Booths had entertained the entire Haywood group in their home, and while here asked about Weaver Higgs of Beaverton, who also made a profound impression on them with his description of Haywood. They did not get to see Weaver, as they left early Tuesday morning, to return to Iowa.

The Booths saw the extension worker for a brief visit, and then took to the road again. It is safe to bet that Iowans will hear a lot about Haywood from the Booths for a long time to come.

the piano by Miss Peggy McCracken, was judged the best soloist among the competitors from virtually every organized community in the county.

First place among string bands went to the Cecil representatives—Lawrence Birchfield, R. A. Warren, Doice Clark, and Ted Clark.

Runnersup were: quartet—Center Pigeon (Mrs. Hilda Kinsland, Miss Francis Blaylock, Mrs. Florse Reece, and J. J. Martin); duet—Sanoak (Doris Queen and Mary Ellen Plemmons, with Juanita Hill accompanying on the piano), solo—L. O. Ferguson, Jr., of Lower Crabtree, with Mrs. Allen Hyatt playing piano accompaniment.

String band—Cruso (Jack Crawford, Bill Cathey, Edgar Lambert, and Robert Justice).

Rev. Plemmons of Iron Duff delivered the sermon.

Others who competed included the Athens Creek Quartet of Betty Farmer, Joyce Caldwell, Charles Fraday, and Fred Farmer, with Mrs. Blanche Franklin at the piano; White Oak Quartet of Medford Burgess, Mary Sue Burgess, James Hugh Burgess, and Bob Inman; Ratcliffe Cove Quartet—Mozelle Limer, Mrs. Mark Palmer, and Bramlet Stone, with Jimmie Galloway at the piano.

Thickety Quartet—Ruby Kilpatrick, Ross Kilpatrick, J. H. Clark, and J. (Red) Anderson, with Gene Britt at the piano;

South Clyde Quartet—Harold Rhodamer, Betty Justice, Mattie Justice, and Mary Justice;

Cove Creek Duet of Mrs. C. H. Franklin and Vera Reeves; and the White Oak Duet—Roslyn Messer and Juanita Messer, with Mrs. Boring playing piano accompaniment.

JANITOR CASHES IN SEATTLE (UP)—A candy manufacturer who died without relatives left all the income from his property, $107,500 worth, to the veteran janitor of the building he owned.

The cost of the Alaska Highway was $138,000,000.

Horne Quits Conservation

J. H. Horne, Rocky Mount newspaper publisher, resigned last Monday from the State Board of Conservation and Development.

The next day, Governor Scott said he had appointed Dr. C. Sylvester Green, editor of the Durham Morning Herald, as Horne's successor. Dr. Green also is a Baptist minister, and is a familiar figure to members of the First Baptist Church of Waynesville, where he has appeared.

In his letter of resignation, Horne had written the Governor: "You can hardly blame me for wondering whether the state advertising program is to be made a political grab bag."

He became the second member of the state agency since early last month to give up his post.

Tom Alexander, owner of the Cataloochee Ranch, filed his resignation with Governor Scott following the Governor's controversy with the board's advertising committee over the appointment of a state advertising director and the disposition of the state advertising contract.

Horne, vice-chairman of the advertising committee, had served on the board for more than 16 years. His current term normally would have expired in 1953.

After Scott announced his appointment of his secretary, Charlie Parker, as head of the advertising division and that he was directing the board to vacate the state ad contract with the Charlotte firm that held it, Horne said the Governor was exceeding his authority.

The handling of the contract and the selection of an advertising director, Horne contended, are functions of the board.

But he was outvoted when the advertising committee met and confirmed Parker's appointment.

In the vote to vacate the ad contract, he and Alexander cast the lone minority dissenting votes.

Alexander resigned shortly afterward, less than two months after he had been appointed by Scott to the board. He expressed the opinion there were political implications in the handling of the contract.

experimental work done on the company land showed, among other things, that Haywood County was ideally suited for the development of white pine, though this tree is not native to this section.

James G. K. McChure, president of the North Carolina Farm Federation and director of the Forestry Association, made the presentation address following Mr. Robert's receipt of the certificate.

Leading the tour through the tract, Ted Davis, a Champion forester, explained the plantings, pointing out the huge Norway spruce that had been set out as seedlings among the first trees to be planted in the area in 1926.

The visitors also examined the experimental plantings of Chinese chestnut, which also had been set out when the tract was first started, and the latest plantings of this variety made three years ago.

The Chinese variety was introduced in this country following the destruction of the native American chestnut trees by the blight some 20 years ago throughout the Appalachians.

Foresters during the tour explained that this variety has been struck by the same blight that killed the native chestnuts but has recovered. In addition to this, they said, the experimental trees also proved resistant to frosts which struck them three times this year.

Some of these imported trees have grown to six inches in diameter and up to 35 feet in height.

The specialists during the program discussed virtually every phase of forestry practice.

Mr. Edmunds told the audience of the extensive tree farm program and District Forester Charles Pettit of the state department of conservation and development outlined the work of tree planting in Jackson County.

The Tennessee Valley Authority's tree distribution program was explained by Charles L. Gouffon, assistant chief of the TVA's forest development branch, and Fred Claridge, assistant state forester for the state department of conservation and development discussed forest management.

The visitors heard the department's state forester, William Reichler, discuss the Jackson County forestry program, and M. L. Snipes, associate Jackson County farm agent, told of the place of
