

Accessories Are Subtle Accents To Fall Tweeds

Leather Is Key Accent

Best To Choose Finest Quality For Long Wear

Fine leather accessories take the spotlight in the Fall fashion picture.

You'll need fine leather gloves, bags, belts and shoes to complement tweeds and fleeces, to accentuate satins and velvets, and to lend interest to the great variety of textured fabrics in the new Fall clothes.

You'll want good quality, long wearing, beautiful leathers. But how do you know you are getting your money's worth when you buy leather goods?

Don't look for bargains. A really fine pair of leather gloves, a leather bag, even a good belt, is relatively expensive because of the time and labor in manufacturing leather.

Good leather, like champagne, can never be hurried. It must be treated slowly and gently, and left to age and mellow before it acquires the characteristics you most prefer in leather. Kislav, the glove maker, estimates that it requires an entire year to produce a pair of fine doeskin gloves.

Good leathers are well worth their extra cost because they will give long wear and keep their elegant good looks.

When buying leather gloves, consider the upkeep cost. Every dry cleaning bill you pay adds to your costs. Turkish and Chinese turned up toes are new and fun.

Platforms are found on strappy styles for dress wear as well as the sling pump which is open or closed in the toe area.

Pumps are detailed this Fall with touches of braid or satin trim. Cut outs and open work, V-cut throats and shell silhouettes in new fabrics are features of this pattern.

The T strap is here but it looks new when combined with very thin straps that wind around the ankle and sometimes form a crisscross pattern on the instep. Ankle straps appear infrequently this Fall but are found with platform soles and on casuals.

Closed Wedges
The biggest news in the casual field is the boot. With shorter hemlines forecast for Fall the boot is an attractive accessory, with turn down cuffs, high peaked backs. These boots are found in suedes or in mixtures of suede and calf.

Closed tailored wedges are popular for casual wear with this Fall's tweed sportswear. Sabots, sometimes with a suede wedge, deeply curving throatline, are handsome for informal wear; hand-tooled leather is a new note.

in soft muted tones of Cobra, I. Miller has created "Drapeau" Silhouetted with an open elegance, they are perfect for afternoon and dress wear.

The open heel and toe shoe, popular the year 'round, with a grillwork of intricately crossed straps that form a high riding vamp.

combine tweed and smooth leather; neat oxfords, instep straps, spectator pumps with black leather heels, diagonal strap treatments and closed toes are marks of these shoes.

Speaking of toes, there are still two active schools of thought on this matter and more than enough variety in shoes to satisfy each group and perhaps you some converts from one camp to the other.

There is no doubt however that the closed shoe with the open look is increasing in fashion importance and in consumer acceptance. Women like the neatness of closed toes and heels combined with airy lightfooted treatments.

Strappings, straps, cut outs and mesh work create this wizardry of open yet closed. Asymetric straps are new, they break the broad look of the foot and are very flattering. Shoes are side swept, showing a maximum of foot on the inside but presenting a closed view on the outer portion of the vamp.

Pumps Detailed
Dressy shoes are whimsies of straps that weave over the instep, round and round the ankle. High is the vamp this year, sometimes the treatment is a solid piece of leather, other times a grillwork of straps. New walled or square toes are very comfortable and give a neat and finished look to street

Greet the Fall season with a gay new hat. Typical of the new crop is the close-fitting bonnet of sapphire-blue felt designed by Harryson. It is trimmed with unwavering bands of self felt and richly draped with taupe mesh veiling.

Tiny Shoes Should Fit

Proper Footwear "Must" for Tots

If you can picture 52 little bones all growing at once, you'll understand why baby needs new shoes now, and again two months from now. For each little foot has 26 bones, and each tiny bone is growing in an awfully big hurry.

And baby's feet keep on growing. The National Shoe Institute estimates that from 2 to 6 years, a youngster's shoe size changes every 4 to 8 weeks.

From 6 to 10 years, a youngster needs a size change every 2 or 3 months, from 10 to 12 years perhaps only every 4 months, and from 12 to 15 years every 4 to 5 months.

Feet Important

So, when you outfit your child remember that his feet are one of the most important parts of his anatomy and badly treated feet can cause a lot of misery.

Worn-out or ill-fitting shoes may weaken a child's feet and give him a clumsy gait and poor posture. Shoes too short or too narrow cause deformed toes, runner's heels, corns, callouses, bunions, and ingrown toenails. On the other hand, shoes too wide or too long will cause blisters and corns, will ruin his posture, make him uncomfortable and force him to walk awkwardly.

Since all these dire things can happen, it behooves a fond parent to have his child's shoes measured which he can do at his favorite shoe store or shoe department, and fitted new ones if he needs them.

Regardless of the shoes children wear for outside activities, Dr. Joseph Lelyveld, chairman of the initial investment. Some leather gloves are guaranteed washable, and guaranteed washability means that the initial price of the glove is all you pay.

Buy a coordinated accessories wardrobe. See that your bag, shoes and gloves are related to each other. This doesn't mean that you have to do an exact matching job on colors or leathers, but it does mean you shouldn't try to team up a fine suede bag with a pair of walking shoes.

The weight of leather, as well as its design, is some indication of where your accessories fit into your activities. Thinner, more delicate leathers, such as kidskin and suede, are for dress wear. Heavier weight, sturdier leathers, such as buckskin and calf, fit better into a casual wardrobe.

If your budget is limited, keep your accessories in simple styles and basic colors. You expect your accessories to last a long, long time. If you stick to simple styles and neutral colors which combine well with almost anything, your audience won't tire of your appearance and neither will you.

This doesn't mean that you must stick to black or brown. A whole new range of neutral colors has appeared in accessories for Fall. These are exciting, wearable shades by themselves and they combine perfectly with almost all fashion colors in ready-to-wear.

Care for your accessories carefully. Read the manufacturer's instructions which come with every accessory purchase you make, and National Health Council, recommends shoes that tie or strap across the instep for school. Such a shoe holds the instep and arch of foot together and gives firm support to growing feet that lead a very active life day in and day out.

Trace Them

In choosing your school-age youngster's shoes carefully, don't neglect toddlers and other little children. In fact, it is in the first years that feet grow so rapidly.

Although older children should be taken to the shoe store to have shoes fitted, it is often possible to take babies and very young chil-

Iron shopping

When you can't take a child with you, here's something to remember: To be sure to buy a shoe that is big enough to prevent cramping the foot, stand the baby on a piece of paper and draw an impression around it. Then buy a shoe one-half inch longer and one-fourth inch wider than the drawing, and choose one with a puffly toe. Again, don't buy too big a shoe.
