

A Preview Of Fall's Latest Fashions For Women

Fall Hats Fit Snug

New Modes Will Be a Snug Fit; With Curves, Too

Hats that curve close to the contour of the head are an attractive complement to new Fall costumes that float away from the figure.

Millinery designers, out of the bulk of fall coats, with small bouffantes that cover the ears and the hat finished with a thin cap or modie, the classic style with shallow, shell-like brims, washed over the crown.

Sculptured folds and rich textured materials, with the curves of the new headgear, are the latest.

asymmetric silhouette, which is flattering to so many types of faces, may be draped well down on one side or given a new twist with an upward and outward flare.

Brimmed hats stress the feminine, bonnet-like curve. Very practical with bulky collars is the brim that arches over the brow, curves close to the cheek and is cut away at the nape of the neck. Rolled edges, soft pleats, twin brims and doubled brims attractively frame the face. Asymmetric brim-lap deep at one side or jut forward and up in a provocative line.

Two Values

Fall felt and fabric hats, great designers. Contrasting textures are frequently combined for a rich effect. "Vis-avis" felts combine a smooth, pale felt on one side and a velvety, dark-toned velvet on the other. "Melusine," a silky beaver-felt which may be dyed in the most delicate shades, is a luxurious and lovely. Velvet, velveteen, jersey, plush and tweed are only a few of the Fall fabrics designers combine with felt or with each other for effective new hats.

Game-bird feathers are a favorite recent for town and country felt. Smooth feathers are often applied at the side of a crown and extended with a soaring quill for a winged look. Flat feathers may be used to give a brim or to contour a crown. Small hats of multi-colored feathers look new with colors of red, green, blue and yellow. Feathers may be further, brown and white. Light blue, black and white.

Exotic feathers in black or pale tones add a touch of femininity to simple silhouettes for afternoon and evening. Small, tightly curled ostrich plumes, simulated egret feathers and delicate Paradise-type feathers are often combined with tiny "jewels." Golden touches, pearls and colored stones sparkle directly for festive occasions.

Veils are usually small and neat, drawn smoothly over the face or at brow or nose length. Delicate patterns in black or neutral tones are most flattering, although there is an occasional boldly draped veil of heavy silk mesh with sear ends that drape about the throat. Scarves of silk or wool jersey are often looped about the shoulders or tied neatly beneath the chin.

Rich Colors

The color range of Fall millinery runs the gamut from rich, dark tones to light, airy shades.

Intense red and smoky greys vie with rich purples, browns such as chestnut, gold and bronze, and hand-painted, shimmering Fall motifs. Light, clean and warm could a more be basic, popular as they combine for a striking contrast in color.

Velvet, plush, copper and glitters. Exotic greens with a yellow touch as moss, spinach and emerald, reds ranging from velvet, suede and brick to ruby wine and cherry. Wedgewood and vivid sapphire blues, and deep plum are among the many exciting Autumn shades that vie with standard black, brown and winter navy for top rank in Fall hat fashions.
