

Furs Slim And Short

Pockets, Cuffs Are Important

The Fall-Winter fur fashion story is built on slim lines and sensibility.

This year, short coats are new. Short means anything from the 30-inch all-season topper to the dressier 40-inch coat. The full-length coat that measures 12 to 13 inches from the floor is definitely second in importance to the shorter fur coat.

The fur silhouette is predominantly fitted. There are many puffed shapes as well as belted coats that can be converted into loose or fitted styles, and a few straight line coats with fullness from a flat inverted pleat at the center back.

Small Collars

Fur coat collars are styled for comfort. For the most part, they are small and always soft. There are saucer collars that stand away from the hairline. There is the long plunge collar, the back-notched club collar, the slashed wing collar and the built-up collar that shoots forward and comes from nothing at the back to a short jutting effect at the front.

Pockets, so important in every fashion this Fall, are also featured on furs. As well as invisible pockets, fur coats are also accented with large, even huge patch pockets, high shoulder pockets and pockets that run into back seams to emphasize hips.

Shoulders are smooth, carefully controlled and have a minimum of padding. The melon or wedge line is the compromise between the set-in and the one-piece sloped shoulder. In many instances, the soft look is exaggerated by closely fitted armholes or with underarm gussets for comfort in movement.

Scarfs

Cuffs are huge, wide, dramatic and on everything. Sometimes they are outlined in silk bengaline, sometimes with link buttons. They are perfection with the new bell-shaped sleeves.

Scarfs are also fashionable on this season's fur coats. There are separate scarfs of contrasting fur and out of collars of contrasting fur. There are ascots that match linings. There are scarf throws that form a part of the shoulder line.

Crisp linings are used for the first time this season and lend a seductive rustle to the flat furs. Taffeta, with tiny faconne patterns or iridescent colorings are used not only inside but as ascots, pocket and cuff linings as well as under lapels.

Sensitive About Bald Spot

CHICOPEE, Mass. (U.P.)—An honi Kawalec's bald spot cost him $50 but he's not sorry. When a neighbor twitted him about it he hit the man in the eye. The $50 was a fine he paid for assault and battery.
