

Part of Happiness

by PEGGY O'MORE AP Newsfeatures

"Your mother is kind," Arleta said stiffly, "but I couldn't eat my breakfast."

"Well, if that isn't just like a Langtry," he snapped. "You talk about saving their own hides—look at there!" he lifted the wet slippers she had worn "and this—the bedraggled skirt of her suit. 'I suppose you went around in these for hours before you changed. And you'd sooner play the martyr, catch your death of cold, than act sensible."

Something was happening to Arleta. First her hair was tossed back, then her shoulders squared, and then one hand reached out to grasp something.

"No you don't!" Kelly's voice was a snarl. "I still carry the fear of the quilt you struck me with. Chips. If there are any more, you wear them."

"I struck you? Why, I never saw you before in my life!"

"I'll admit that," he agreed bitterly. "I was a woman in your path; a half-baked, low-headed kid daring to trespass on Langtry property. Oh, forget it. Now sit down and eat before I—"

"Knock me down," inquired Arleta, remembering. "As you tried to knock me off my pony just before I struck you?"

"I tried to—say, what are you talking about?"

Arleta swept up her hair. "You're not the only one with scars. See this? This is where your rock hit me; that's why I went after you with my quilt. I remember now. You circled around while I was trying to reach home."

"I circled—" A moment for thought and Kelly's laugh boomed out. "If that isn't the damndest— So that's what happened, and that's why those kids took to cover. They expected your father—"

"I didn't tell. Dad wouldn't have let me out alone again." She spoke slowly, heretofore unrelated events falling into sequence. And then she gave a tiny smile. "I rather stayed under cover myself. I was afraid I'd be whipped for hurring you. But I was so angry."

"Angry," Kelly began, setting the tiny table he'd drawn before the fire. "You might have been killed."

Intent upon what he was saying, Arleta automatically tasted the food. "Why, this is good," she exclaimed, after a few bites.

"Darned right. I'm a good cook, that is, a good packer of cooks. Refused to be Mother's son until she'd proven her ability."

"You're a good disher-upper," conceded Arleta, with meaning.

He'd brought a two-gallon jar of drinking water, and now that some of it was boiling over coals, he'd raked to one side, he brewed the tea, poured it, then looked around for a second cup and was rewarded with the pried out measuring cup.

And then he stood up. "Better let you get some rest. Flying back tomorrow." I noticed the airline tag on your luggage."

"Tomorrow." But isn't this tomorrow, I mean—"

He looked at his watch. "Ten forty-five today."

"But it seems days since I—"

"Days? I was back within two hours after leaving you on the road. But about tomorrow—want

Smog Can Be Forecast, U. S. Experts Contend

CLEVELAND, O. (AP)—Smog conditions such as the recent fatal one in Donora, Pa., and the poisoning one near Cincinnati, O., can be avoided with a little advance notice, government experts claim.

The experts say they can predict 24 hours in advance when atmospheric conditions will occur that "lock" lethal concentrations and combinations of industrial gases close to the ground.

Controllers in Cleveland now are searching for the elements of concentrations and the companies that spill them in the air.

me to pick you up? You've a watch here, haven't you?"

She had a watch, still set to Eastern time.

"I don't know what connections you'll need to make," he continued.

"Connections?" she asked. "But I'm not going anywhere."

"You're not? Oh, now, look, you can't stay on here."

"Go on," she said. "Go on and tell me why I can't."

Howard Kelly stood staring down at Arleta, all of the distress he was feeling in his glance.

"Isn't this," his hand indicated the destruction below "enough?"

"Enough to make me stay," she replied. "What's been done is the effect I must know the cause."

"The eternal Pandora," he commented solemnly.

"But don't you understand?" she asked reasonably. "Today you hated me because, when I was a small girl, I'd struck at you, you believed in marriage. Tonight when I learned it was you I'd struck, I immediately decided it was you who had thrown the rock."

"If I lay flat by flat I can clear up all of the—"

"Oh, Chips, don't! What could you do that your parents and their attorneys couldn't do?"

He gave her time to digest that, then added: "Alice told me you are come to be married soon, they can you clear up within a few weeks what your father failed to clear up in that same number of years."

"I can't," she replied slowly. "I shall postpone my marriage until I can—"

Howard Kelly stared at the top fire. What could he say to stop this girl from poking the sharp stick of an investigation into the Langtry hornet's nest?

"Chips," he drew a long breath, then plunged, "suppose your investigation convinced you that the people who tried to destroy this place were justified."

Beef Sale

The Champion Company, with Mr. F. T. Peden buying, purchased four fat calves, including Ted Francis' calf of Haywood County, and paid third high price of the sale by purchasing Julian Buchanan's calf from Jackson County for $36.

Thad Medford of Iron Duff sold his calf for $35 to A & P Tea Company purchasing it.

Sluder Furniture Company of Canton purchased the fat calf owned by Dale Medford for $20 per pound.

County Agent Wayne Corpeing said these people and industries are to be complimented for their work in helping make the sale a success and in promoting better beef cattle for Haywood County and Western North Carolina.

Haywood County individuals and businesses purchased 38 of the 77 fat calves sold in the sale.

Mr. Rogers, told the ministers Saturday that the law requires that at least 15 per cent of the voters who had cast ballots in the previous gubernatorial election must sign such a petition before it could be approved for the scheduling of a beer-wine vote.

Last week, the Rev. M. R. Williamson, pastor of the Waynesville Presbyterian Church said the Association planned to prepare a new petition.

Mr. Williamson, who is chairman of the group's committee on moral reported on these plans at today's luncheon meeting.

The Rev. Horace Smith, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Canton will preside.

In other business, the Rev. D. D. Crook, pastor of the Clyde Baptist Church, told the Association of methods for Haywood County's participation in the Friendship Team for North Carolina.

Mr. Gross is area chairman for the Christian Rural Overseas Program sponsoring the Friendship Teams from each state for relief of war-stricken nations suffering from food shortages.

Rare Emperor Geese Captured for Zoo

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (UP)—Pittsburgh's Highland Park zoo has acquired four emperor geese and it is believed they are the only ones in this country.

The rare specimens were captured off the Arctic coast by Dr. D. S. Newill of Connelville, Pa., who has just returned from a year's tour of Alaska, the Orient and the Pacific.

"They've rarely been seen by white men, much less captured," Newill said. "I'm quite sure these are the first to be seen in the United States."
