"Missing person" is a special classification of the bureau. Of the 26,890 cases this year 12,321 persons were found in hospitals or morgues, 4,820 from the city's five boroughs were tagged "missing persons" and finally accounted for, and 8,276 were "missing persons" from other cities who came to New York to "get lost".

Of the 26,890 only 1,473 are still 'unaccounted for" by the bureau. Total Always Rises

The total increases each year. Last year's 12 month total was 23,516.

Most of the bureau's personnel are identification experts who can identify a person from a piece of burned clothing or a single gold tooth

Of those found in hospitals, 100 per cent are identified, 98.2 per ent of bodies taken to the morgues are identified. The overall total of 96.2 accounted for is brought down by insufficient information furnished by authorities in other cities, Cronin said.
