tank, 150 feet of three-quarter inch booster hose. The main hose reel carries 1,400 feet of standard 2 1/2 inch double jacket hose. The truck has two warning signals, a five rotating siren, with a flasher light, and a 12 inch bell. Additional equipment includes a 14 foot ladder with towing hook, a 24 foot extension ladder, two saws, crowbar, and two life-type extinguishers. The truck has two wheels which interest I heard, disintegrated in the process, and the truck attracted much attention while on display yesterday afternoon.

Showing Thursday and Friday at Park

Assistant District Attorney Spencer Tracy and his lawyer wife, Katherine Hepburn, do some extra-curricular arguing in this domestic scene from "Adam's Rib," M-G-M's hilarious comedy opening at the Park Theatre this week. Judy "Born Yesterday" Holiday, Tom Ewell, David Wayne and Joan Hogan, recruited from the Broadway stage, are also featured in the laugh riot, directed by George Cukor.

At Strand Sunday and Monday

INDIAN ATTACK. From left to right, Captain John Wayne, Lt. Harry Carey, Jr. and Lt. John Agar reconnoiter as hostile Indians prepare for a deadly raid, in the John Ford-Merian C. Cooper presentation, "She Wore a Yellow Ribbon," in color by Technicolor. The trio co-stars in the Argosy Picture with Joanne Dru and Ben Johnson. Coming to the Strand Theatre Sunday and Monday.

Hollywood Ideal Place To Rear Family, Says Actor-Father Of Five

By PATRICIA CLARY
United Press Staff Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD, UP—You folks who've been thinking of Hollywood as a place where infants clutch a rattle with one hand and a reefer with the other can go stand in the corner. If you think movie star parents dump their infants in an eminently nursery and have to be formally introduced next time they meet, you're wrong there too. Stephen McNally, who qualifies both as an actor and a parent by being a star of 20th Century-Fox's "No Way Out" and a father of five, says Hollywood is the best place he's come across to raise a family. "A man in Hollywood has lots of time to be with his family," he said. "You have weeks, sometimes months, between pictures, when you can be a full-time husband and father. "Even when you're working, you have regular hours with evenings and Sundays off to see the kids. That's more than lots of men in ordinary occupations have." McNally was a New York attorney before he became an actor, but he couldn't afford even a wife on his legal earnings. He got married after he got a job in the Broadway stage production of "Johnny Belinda," and the first income tax exemption came along during his second Broadway hit, "The Wooky." "I never saw my baby at all while I was working on the stage," he said. "He'd be asleep while I was working at night, I'd be sleeping mornings while he was awake. With matinees, special performances and benefits, there wasn't much chance to be a family man." Since he's come to Hollywood, McNally said, he's had a chance to watch four other children grow up. For that reason alone, movie work beats everything else all hollow. "Maybe I sound like a one-man chamber of commerce," he said, "but I get fed up with all the talk about sordid Hollywood life. If anybody really investigated, I bet they'd find there are more happy families in Hollywood than elsewhere. You don't hear about them
