The vehicle to go open the gate to the barnyard of Medford Leatherwood. As the driver of the truck was returning to his vehicle, the Caldwell car is said to have crashed into the rear of the truck. The car rolled down the highway, coming to a stop some 139 feet away, according to Patrolman Harold Dayton, one of the investigating officers. The body of Frank Caldwell was picked up 127 feet from where the crash occurred, Patrolman Dayton said. Tommy Caldwell was still in the wreckage when the first help arrived, the patrolman declared. Caldwell was rushed to the hospital, and several hours after the accident talked to officers. He died about noon Tuesday.

Much of the load of corn was spilled into the highway by the impact, and the truck, said to have been owned by Medford Leatherwood, was damaged.

Patrolman Dayton said that he learned that Hub Messer and D. C. Jenkins were near the scene when the accident happened.

Assisting a patrolman Dayton in the investigation were Patrolman W. R. Wooten, and Deputies Wade McDaniel, John Kerley and Horace Mehahey.

The crash attracted much interest, and many people visited the scene.

A wrecker crew had to pick up many parts that were torn from the car, as they started to bring it to Waynesville. Since it was placed on the parking lot of Davis-Liner Motor Sales, it was estimated that 2,500 people had viewed the wreckage, some even braving the rain to make the inspection. All garagement who saw the wreckage said it was the most completely demolished car they had ever seen.

Frank Caldwell was a World War II veteran, holding the rank of master sergeant. He entered service in March, 1942. He saw active combat in Europe and Africa. He was wounded twice, once in Holland, in October, 1944, and again in Belgium in December, 1944. He received a large number of medals and citations, including the Purple Heart. He received his discharge in September, 1946. Frank had engaged in farming since his discharge.

Tommy Caldwell, also a veteran, served in the Navy. He was inducted in August, 1944, and received his discharge in July, 1946. He trained at Camp Perry, Va., and at several stations in Rhode Island. He was in active combat in Pacific and Asiatic waters, and received several citations. His rank was seaman first class. Tommy worked at The Dayton Rubber Company.

Double funeral services were held this morning in the Dellwood Baptist church with the Rev. Brown Caldwell, the Rev. George Mehahey and the Rev. John Fingering officiating. Interment was in the family plot on Jonathan Creek.

MORE ABOUT Friday 13th

Friday the 13th.

This particular day, he decided on a magnificent plan to guard himself against any further catastrophe.

He went to bed. When his hour-glass went off at 7:30 A. M., he just chuckled smugly, hauled the quilts up closer to his chin, and turned over on his other side.

Two hours later, the people in the apartment upstairs started a party.

Three hours later, the festivities weakened the ceiling so badly the piano fell through it and pinned MacClamrock to the bed.

Mrs. MacClamrock became irked at this spectacle of her husband idling away his time playing with a piano and promptly filed suit for divorce.

His three children got mad at him because he wouldn't come out and play baseball with them.

The people upstairs got mad at him for not returning the piano. When he failed to show up for work at noon, his employer fired him.

Feeling that nothing worse could happen to him the rest of the day, MacClamrock pushed the piano away, rose, got dressed, and went out.

An hour later, he found another job that paid twice as much as he had been getting at his old one.

Mrs. MacClamrock, pleased with her husband's apparent determination, tore up her suit for divorce and threw her lawyer over her left shoulder for good luck.

The children meanwhile had become interested in playing the piano that had fallen through the ceiling.

Several years later, three of them were recognized geniuses and were giving command performances before the crowned heads of Europe, Asia, Africa, and Brooklyn.

The fourth, who developed his genius in another direction, later became known as the Eddie Duchin of the Renaissance.

It just goes to show. You can never tell.

used him often during the regular season. He set up one touchdown with a beautiful punt return, caught one of Travis Tidwell's 20 passes, and did his usually brilliant punting job. But what impressed Blue most was Justice's work on defense. Choo Choo blocked and tackled like a 300-pound guard and once hit a Yankee ball-carrier so hard that the thud could be heard all over the huge stadium. Blue called Charlie, who made his All-American ratings on his offensive performances, one of the game's defensive stars.

He also had a highly respectful report on the work of Weiner, the great Tar Heel end.

Weiner, who tied the intercollegiate pass-catching mark last season, made catches that were only a shade short of miraculous, says this observer. He was surrounded by three Yankees close to the sidelines on one occasion when he snatched one of Tidwell's tosses for a 16-yard gain.

Referring to Weiner and O'Quinn, the red-headed Demon who set the nation's pace season before last in yards gained catching passes, Blue summarized their performances in this way: "They were catching them at their shoe strings, over their shoulders, and at their hips. They were catching them every way except by using mirrors."

In general, for the loyal North Carolina rooters, the game marked a highly gratifying end to an exciting if disappointing season.

gah Forests, and Paul Russell, assistant supervisor of Nantahala, attended the meeting, and gave the committee an outline of their plans for development of recreational areas.

The lack of adequate funds presented the big problem for both groups. They feel that their 1950 budget will be about the same as the current appropriation. Pisgah receives about $8,000 for recreational maintenance and construction, and Nantahala about $5,000 for the same program.

Neither appropriation is sufficient to replace any of the buildings, such as sheds, picnic tables or benches. The funds are just about absorbed in maintenance and cleaning up after picnickers.

Last year Pisgah had 1,363,200 visitors, and Nantahala just under the million mark.

He said that, since that time, he and his fellow board members never split their vote on any controversy that came before them, though they did have debates on some occasions.

The only re-appointment Governor Scott made to the five-member board was that of Charles M. Britt, an Asheville Democrat, whom he had appointed last August to fill the unexpired term of Elections Chairman Hubert E. Olive of Lexington.

Other changes on the board included the appointment of D. E. Henderson, Sr., Charlotte attorney, to succeed Walter Woodson of Salisbury, James E. Snyder of Lexington, secretary and legal adviser to the Coble Dairy Products Co., to succeed Adrian H. Mitchell of Winton; and P. E. Brown, North Wilkesboro lumberman, to succeed Thomas C. Carter of Mebane.

Henderson and Ferebee were selected as the Democratic Party representatives, and Snyder and Brown, Republican representatives, on the board.

The appointments are for terms of four years each.

when the elections board worker has to check on a particular registrant.

The pages are numbered and the names of the registrants are listed in alphabetic order. On the right hand margin of every second page is an index which lists page number of an alphabetic group.

To hunt up data on a voter, all the worker has to do is glance at the margin, find the initial which starts the voter's name, see what page number his name would be listed on, then turn to that page directly.

The new book also will be a lot easier on the eyes of the officials who have to pore over long lists of names, for each of the pages are tinted a very light shade of green.

This color, scientists say, is the easiest on the eyes.
