J. A. Prevost Back From Visiting Mahogany Timber Operations In Mexico

Rotarians here Friday heard J. A. Prevost tell of his recent trip to Mexico, and an inspection of lumbering operations in the jungles of "the Egypt of the Western Hemisphere".

Mr. Prevost was the guest of one of the largest mahogany operators in the world. The firm owns 4 1/2 million acres of mahogany timberlands, and operates scores of mills, and even owns villages.

Mr. Prevost is one of the firm's customers, using a large quantity of mahogany in the manufacture of furniture.

"I never thought I'd ever see houses built of solid mahogany. In one village in Mexico, all lumber used was solid mahogany, since they had no other type suitable for building," he said.

The 12 visitors from the states made a trip back into the heart of the jungle, and saw every phase of lumbering as carried on in Mexico. "Some is highly mechanized, and still in other sections, the operations are carried on in a primitive fashion. In some of the territory, it is so rugged, and rocky, that even modern tractors cannot make headway. In the dense jungles, the huge machines make a path stopping at nothing under a 24-inch tree."

The Americans could not get accustomed to the highly seasoned Mexican foods, and literally fasted at times. The water systems in various villages, and even larger cities were so primitive that the visitors drank coffee, and never used "raw" water.

Mr. Prevost described the day as extremely hot, and the nights brought a penetrating damp coldness, which added to the discomfort of those unaccustomed to such climates.

The party attended a bull fight in Mexico City before their return home. The occasion was colorful, and filled with excitement, although the Americans did not seem to get the "thrill" out of seeing six bulls killed as did the yelling throngs of Mexicans. Some of the visitors had to leave the fight soon after the torture of the animal started, and the blood began to spurt.

The fight gave the visitors an insight into the habits, and favorite sport of the Mexicans, although it kept some of the folk from the States from enjoying steaks for a long time.

The trip was made by plane from here to Mexico. While in Mexico they used every means of conveyance, from narrow gauge railroads, boats, private plane, car, and truck.

Since Mr. Prevost is an excellent golfer, he had an opportunity of playing on one of Mexico's largest courses, and the president's son, also a talented golfer, followed the foursome, but did not play.

A visit to a seacoast town, to see export operations made a profound impression on Mr. Prevost, because there he saw a shipment of mahogany being loaded on a ship, and a closer look revealed the shipmen was being made to his plant at Bryson City, which specializes in mahogany furniture.

Coming To The Strand

George Murphy and Alice Faye in Realart's gay musical comedy "You're A Sweetheart". Coming to the Strand Theatre Wednesday and Thursday.

Too Cold Outside, Ice-Bound Victim Says

SPOKANE, Wash. (UP)—An elderly man called the fire department to advise he was trapped in his house by ice.

Jay Wallace, fire department radio operator, said the man reported the snow on his roof had melted and run down over both doors and frozen solid. "I can't get out," he said, "and I'm too old to go through a window."

Wallace suggested he call a carpenter, or if he wanted, a fireman would be sent over to chop him out. But the man replied:

"Oh, never mind. I don't want to go out in this weather, anyway."

Enough Is Enough, Baldy Decides

TAMPA, Fla. (UP)—Cy Young of the city board ordinarily is easy to get along with.

But he finally got enough of kidding about his hairless pate. A visiting lecturer seemed always to be facing Young when the representative finally exploded in the lecture hall.

"Would you mind looking at someone besides me?" he bellowed. "Maybe it's because my head shines like a mirror and everyone can see his face reflected, but I still don't like being the target of every person who speaks."

Roughhouse, Tiger Red Move Into Society

BANGOR, Me. (UP)—The advertisement on the society page read:

"Of particular interest will be the main contest, which of itself will assure you of an enjoyable evening. Mr. Albert Couture of Lewiston and Mr. Theodore Brassley of Portland will be the participants. Both gentlemen are superbly conditioned and each has avowed to establish himself as the other's master."

The idea of an enterprising pro-Tiger Ted Brassley.

High Blood Pressure

When the blood pressure remains continuously high, the heart enlarges. The heart muscle becomes thicker and stronger. This is the direct effect of the greater work required of the heart to maintain an adequate circulation. Your age, plus 100, is not a rule for proper blood pressure. Blood pressure should remain much the same throughout adult life.
