This Will Make You Forget Your Troubles — Try It

The youngster on the left is all set for another raisin, while the one on the right is pouting because he thought he was going to get a raisin, and didn't. These pictures were made by Josef Schneider, a successful photographer of children. The raisin technique works this way. Pop a raisin in a child's mouth... then another... then one more. You'll get surprise, delight, anticipation... each one a picture. Then break the rhythm and pop the next raisin in your own mouth and another and one more. You'll get bewilderment, reproach and anger... again a picture in each emotion, says photographer Josef Schneider. Anyway, here's proof of what he is talking about. The picture on the left he labels "Raisin Hopes" while the one on the right is called "Raisin Pouts." This is something the camera fans of this area might try.

A total of 1,350 hospitals throughout the country have been given careful checkups for fire and accident hazards since the start of a "nationwide" inspection program inspired by the disastrous hospital fires at Effingham, Ill., and at Davenport, Iowa.

The death toll in the Effingham tragedy a year ago was 74. In the Davenport fire last winter 41 persons died. The Davenport hospital had been scheduled for inspection a few days after the date on which it burned.

More than 1,700 engineers and field men from fire and casualty insurance companies are engaged in making the inspections. They draw up specific recommendations for improving each hospital's safety.

9,000 To Be Checked

The National Board of Fire Underwriters reports that more than 9,000 other hospitals are scheduled for checkups this year and that a total of 9,000 institutions will be surveyed before the program is completed.

Col. Perrin C. Cothran, vice-president of the Phoenix Insurance Co., of Hartford, Conn., who is chairman of the special committee on hospital inspections, says "the scope of these inspections goes beyond the correction and elimination of hazards to life."

"We hope," he says, "that one of the most lasting results will be improvements in the training of hospital personnel and increased consciousness of fire dangers on the part of all who operate hospitals."

Where Lives Were Saved "How important this can be was demonstrated only recently when fire destroyed part of the Sauk County Hospital, near Reedsburg, Wis. Employees of that hospital had been trained in fire safety. While three employees fought the fire with inside hose lines, other employees removed 100 mental patients from the building. Help was quickly summoned from nearby fire departments.

"This emergency was so well controlled that employees and some mental patients were able to re-enter the building to remove all mattresses, bedding, clothing and store-room supplies so that if the whole building had been destroyed these supplies would have been available for the patients in other quarters."

"Fortunately not a patient lost his life or was injured and the building was saved."

Camera Club Sets Up Definite 1950 Program

Members of the recently-organized Haywood Camera Club last Tuesday night got acquainted with each others' equipment and lined up a series of specific programs for their regular monthly meetings.

They also got their first photo assignment from Projects Chairman Frank Miller of Waynesville, forester of The Champion Paper and Fibre Company.

That is to "shoot" pictures of flowers.

The prints will be studied, criticized, and analyzed from the standpoint of composition and technique at the June meeting.

Miller later will make other specific assignments of photo subjects. One project will be to get action pictures, another, mountain landscape shots; another, still life; and so on. Each member will work on the same assignment, and the prints will be discussed at the regular meeting following about two months after the assignment of the specific subject.

With Howard Clapp, Club president, in charge, the members also set up a definite schedule of subjects to be discussed at the regular sessions.

At the next one, May 2, they'll study press photography technique and problems. Clapp said a newspaper s'uff photographer would be invited to lead the discussion.

At succeeding meetings, the members will take up these subjects, in order: films and photo paper; color photography; composition in taking pictures; photo-making technique; and dark-room technique.

At the same time, the members discussed plans for holding a photo exhibit in the fall.

They also appointed Bill Lindau as the club's publicity chairman.

BIBLE QUIZ

AP Newsfeatures

This is the first of a new weekly series, designed to test your knowledge of things Biblical.

Each week in the Mountaineer you will find a new Bible Quiz illustration, suggesting a passage from the Old or New Testament. See if you can identify the scene—and recall the story from the Bible in connection with it.

The illustrations are the work of William Sharp, cartoonist, caricaturist and etcher, he was forced to flee from his native Germany when his biting satire aroused the hatred of Hitler and the Nazis.

Soon after gaining refuge in this country, he sketched FDR in the White House and his other subjects have included governors, celebrities in the news and many courtroom scenes. Since he sketched Bruno Hauptmann on trial for kidnapping the Lindbergh baby, he has been busy with his sketch pad in most of the famous American trials. One of his etchings is included in the permanent exhibit at the Library of Congress in Washington.

Red Squill, Good Poison Poison which the farmer most commonly uses to make good rats out of bad rats is Red Squill, recommended by the department of agriculture because it is effective, cheap and harmless to domestic animals. When dogs and cats eat it they throw it up, for it is an emetic. Chickens, too, can eat it with impunity, but when a rat gets it into his system it is pay day. At the outbreak of World War II the supply of squill, which comes from Mediterranean countries, was suddenly cut off. Squill is an extract from a bulb grown chiefly in Italy.

Phantom Mysteries Revealed

The McDonnell FH-1 Navy jet fighter, popularly dubbed the "Phantom" by our air sailors, has had a portion of the skin of her fuselage removed in order that spectators visiting the Navy's Mobile Exhibit may be afforded an X-ray view of the internal workings which give the speedy aircraft its get up and go.
