My name is Tommy Thompson!

"I know my own name. My mother and daddy taught me so I could tell people. My name is important! It's the only way people can tell who I am and who I belong to."

Tommy is right! Names are important to people. And they're just as important to things you buy in stores. Each product has a name, too... a brand name! That's the name the maker puts on his product, so you can tell it from any other.

Shopping for products by brand names is the one way—the only way—you can buy the food, the clothing, and the furniture that exactly suits your taste.

The brand name on a product means protection for you. By knowing brand names, you make the manufacturer responsible for the quality of products that bear his name. Any manufacturer knows that if you find his products good, you will buy them. If not, you won't—and the manufacturer will be forced out of business.

Brand names mean progress. Each manufacturer works constantly to improve his product so that his brand name will come to stand for better and better quality and value.

You get quality, protection... and you get exactly what you want when you know, and use, brand names. You'll find some of the most famous brand names on the pages of this newspaper.

Ox Joints for Budget Dinner

By ALICE DENHOFF

THE good housewife just refuses to snoot any cut of meat, however lowly. We know one good lady whose family just cheer when she serves up a dish of braised ox-joints. She cheers, too, because of the budget. The dish is served with hot buttered noodles, parsleyed carrots, a dish of Bermuda onion rings and ripe olives, a head lettuce salad with a blue cheese dressing. For dessert, at this time of year, she tops off the meal with a strawberry-rhubarb pie.

To serve 4, have 2 oxjoints cut in 2-inch lengths. Wash pieces of oxtail. Then broil for about 10 min., turning frequently until golden brown on all sides, about 10 min.

Meanwhile, saute one c. minced onion in 3 tsp. fat in large, covered kettle until tender. Add oxtail pieces and 2 c. hot water, one tsp. vinegar, ½ tsp. minced garlic, 2 tsp. salt, ¼ tsp. pepper and ½ tsp. granulated sugar. Cover, simmer 3½ hours, or until meat is tender, replenishing water with boiling water, if necessary.

Remove meat to hot platter, and keep it warm. Thicken gravy using 3 tbsp. flour blended with 3 tbsp. cold water to each c. of liquid. Pour over or serve with meat and hot noodles.

Making the Pie

To prepare the pie, combine one c. sugar, ¼ tsp. salt, ¼ tsp. nutmeg, 2 tsp. quick-cooking tapioca, ¼ c. orange juice and 3 c. cut rhubarb. Place in 9-inch pan lined with pastry. Top with 1 c. strawberries and dot with ½ tsp. butter. Arrange whole pastry top or lattice covering. Bake in hot oven (450 F.) for 10 min., then in 350 F. for 30 min.

Finally, there's just room for a repeat on the recipe for crunch chocolate bars, for which several requests are at hand. Melt ½ lb. semi-sweet chocolate, or sweet milk chocolate over hot water; add one c. bran cereal. Stir until blended. Pack into a loaf pan that has been lined with wax paper. Allow to set until chocolate hardens; cut into bars. Yield: 4 bars (4½ inches—4½x6½-inch pan). The bars are grand, kept in refrigerator for emergency refreshments if they get a chance to stay there long enough!
