Rows and Rows Of Mountain Peaks In Park

From atop Black Camp Gap, one can see an endless row of towering mountain peaks, with deep gorges and valleys below. This scene is one that attracts hundreds of people every year.

Azalea Flourishes On Gregory's Bald

"One of the most beautiful stands of azaleas north of Charleston" claim some who have seen the flower display atop Gregory's Bald. Just why this particular mountain, 5,000 feet above sea level, is completely bare of trees, yet nourishes a magnificent stand of azaleas is a fact as yet unexplained by naturalists. One hundred and thirty-seven varieties of azaleas, ranging in hue from white to deep crimson, have been classified on Gregory's Bald. Some of the azalea plants grow as high as eighteen feet.

Said one visitor, "It looks as though a landscape artist came here and went mad." Whatever the explanation of the azalea display, it is a unique one, perfectly complemented by a 360-degree panoramic view of the Smoky Mountains National Park, the National Forest, and a patchwork of cultivated areas.
