It would be helpful if we always knew how our dates sized us up. Sometimes we'd be flattered or perhaps shocked or offended. A good key to how men type girls might be found in Norton Jonathan's "Guide Book for the Young Man About Town" (John C. Winston Co.) in which Mr. Jonathan lists the "types" of girls the average young man might meet. To the gentleman, he says:

"Perhaps you can identify the type you like best and thereupon make effective preparations for interesting the first maiden of that type wandering your way. You'll be able to recognize the different types as you encounter them and plan your campaign and behavior or your retreat."

Girls, he adds, just in the nick of time are seldom "completely of one type. Many combine two or three—or even five or six."

Here are some of Mr. Jonathan's descriptions. See where you fit in, and profit by it accordingly.

The Clinging Vine . . . Coy gestures and thoroughly feminine manners. She'll want a proper introduction. She likes big, strong, ruthless males, is chronically fragile and helpless. She'll wear ribbons, bows and other gadgets from childhood in her hair. She'll listen to your exploits, with innocent eyes of wonder.

Give her flowers and candy, advises Mr. Jonathan. He suggests treating her with the utmost chivalry, never taking her to hockey games, prize fights, revues or wrestling matches. She likes to be helped on with her coat and reassured when entering a dark house.

The Prom Princess . . . Thrives on stag lines. She is either beautiful, wealthy, or a heavy necker. Mr. Jonathan has found. Her mind "operates like a cash register." She calls 'em all "honey" or "darling." She will dazzle you telling stories about other men, yawns in your face if you bore her. A "line" means everything to her. She'll ditch you the moment someone more fascinating and reckless with cash comes along.

The Popular Girl . . . Men like her because she is a good sport. She shows appreciation whether her "date" has spent ten cents or ten dollars. Long after her romantic attachment has passed, her young men remain as good friends. She'll marry the right man—and stay married to him.

The Home Girl . . . Likes simple, domestic things. Little attentions such as flowers mean a lot to her. She'll cook for you but wants to be helped with the dishes. Likes you to be interested in the downtrodden and babies.

The Working Girl . . . Enjoys

JAMES NAMED TO BLANTON POST

Ralph James, ex-Lee Edwards High and High Point College coach, recently was named head of the new athletic department at Blanton's Business College of Asheville. James, who coached Charlie Justice in high school, tutored the High Point College basketball squad until the end of last season.

long serious talks in dimly-lit restaurants is flattered if asked for her advice on trivial problems.

The Sports Girl . . . She is naturally aggressive, wears a shiny nose like a badge of honor, falls under the spell of brawny life guards and handsome polo players. She'll trade a November football player for a December basketball player.

The Puritan . . . Known as Ice-box Irene or the Cold Sister, sits on her far side of the car seat, resists clinches at dances, won't let you hold her hand, avoids dark carriers, opens the door the moment the car stops before her house after an evening date.

Giggling Gertie . . . If you like her tell her you admire big strong, silent women. If you don't like her tell her to shut up and act her age.

The Unappreciated Girl . . . Wails that no one loves her. She's not appreciated at home, by her teachers or her boss. Let her pour forth her woes, but don't agree with her. She wants to hear that she's mistaken. So with sincerity in your eyes, tell her how much you admire and appreciate her.

The Shy Girl . . . She is a shrewd judge of character, so a boy must watch his step. Nothing crude, silly or dominating enters the boy's campaign. He steers clear of large parties and double dates who are strangers to her.

At Lake Tonight

DR. JOHN BRANSCOMB, pastor of the First Methodist church of Orlando, Fla., and president of the Southeastern Jurisdictional board of missions and church extensions, will be the speaker at Lake Junaluska tonight at eight o'clock.

FIRST CALL

The first call for North Carolina National Guard units was sounded this week. Two special outfits—a radar maintenance group and a combat engineer battalion—were ordered into service. Neither is attached to any specific division. There's no prospect in the immediate future of outfits attached to divisions being called up. That covers "line" units like regiments, battalions, companies of infantry, tanks, or artillery which form units of combat division.

NO SUGAR SHORTAGE
North Carolina's senior senator, Clyde R. Hoey, says he has been assured there is plenty of sugar. There is no reason to hoard the sweet stuff, he declares flatly. Senator Hoey reports this assurance came from the Secretary of Agriculture, who ought to know. He quotes Secretary Brannan, furthermore, as saying the record quota for import into this country has been boosted to seven million 850 thousand tons. If necessary, arrangements can be made to get 400,000 more tons he adds.

don't DO that!

TAKE IT EASY . . . Don't go in for heavy cooking in hot weather. Neither you nor your family will appreciate the hot food.
