Marines Return to Korea After 79 Years Complete Field

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE AP Newsfeatures Writer

WASHINGTON-U. S. Marines on their way from the west coast to the Battle of Korea will not be the first Leathernecks to fight on Korean soil

Seventy-nine years ago a battalion of Marines, with the support of ships and sailors of the Asiatic fleet, won the two-day Battle of the Salee River Forts. It was the first time that soldiers of a western power had spent a night on Korean

The battle followed the alleged treacherous firing by Korean soldiers on an American party surveying the river. Asiatic Fleet Admiral John J. Rodgers had obtained permission from Korean authorities to make navigation sound-

For several years prior to the Salee river fracas Koreans reportedly had mistreated American sailors and others shipwrecked on Korean shores, Some Americans were said to have been killed.

How Situation Developed In the spring of 1871 the United States Minister to China, Frederick Low, arranged a conference with Korean authorities looking to the protection of American citizens. Low enlisted the services of the Asiatic fleet, then in Japanese waters. Low boarded Adm. Rodgers' flagship, the Colorado, and the squadron arrived off Salee river anchorage late in May. After an exchange of apparently friendly visits between Koreans and Americans, the river surveying expedition was launched.

The surveying party was suddenly fired upon from the Korean forts and the beach. American gunboats steamed into action, returning the fire and rescuing the surveyors.

Low and Rodgers demanded an explanation and reparations. The Koreans failing to give a satisfactory answer in 10 days, an expedition of gunboats with a Marine landing party and seven field pieces sailed up the river.

The guns of the three Korean forts were silenced by fire from the American vessels. The following day a Marine battalion and a detachment of sailors, led by Capt. McLane Tilton, stormed and captured the forts.

Marines' 100th Battle The Salee river engagement was the Marine Corps, established in 1775, had participated. The Marines' first battle was during a raid on New Providence in the Bahamas on March 2, 1776.

volunteer enlistments had increased Marine strength to 66,000.

The corps now has an active orce of 74,000 and a reserve of about 90,000, Its peak strength in World War II, when it engaged in about 37 major campaigns and battles in the Pacific, was 486,000. The Marine Credo

The Marines pride themselves, as being the possessors to a high degree of three military assets. These are their traditional fighting spirit, specialized skill in amphibous operations and constant state of readiness.

Maj. Gen. M. H. Silverthorn, director of the Marine Reserve, said recently "the Marine corps does not aspire to have a second land army.

"It is the readiness of the Fleet Marine Forces rather than their size which is the important con-"They are sideration," he said. capable of providing moderatesized amphibious strinking forces on short notice-forces which could will be of vital importance in the period of tension immediately preceding a war or in the early stages of a war when the country is not yet fully mobilized.
